THE KANSAS QUESTION.

The Administration and Governor Walker.

Special from Our Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Nov. 28, 1857.

The public announcement of the serious antagonism between the Administration and Governor WALKER, relative to Kansas affairs, has attracted the gravest attention. No one questions the facts as presented. By general consent the condition of antagonism is accepted on all hands. The President is thought to have committed himself so decidedly to the policy of sustaining the action of the Constitutional Convention, that he cannot recede; and those who know the earnest convictions of duty and sound policy upon which Governor WALKER bases his opposition to the course of that body, are well assured that he will stand firm as a rock, make the distinct issue before the people, and let the country decide between the President and himself.

Further conference between the President and the Governor has only increased the improbability of their coming together upon a common platform. Mr. BUCHANAN and his Cabinet, after reviewing the whole subject again on Friday, stand a unit against WALKER and in favor of sustaining the Convention. Not only do they accept that course as an inevitable duty: they go further, and commend as highly judicious the ingenious device by which the Convention seeks to cheat the people of Kansas out of an opportunity to vote upon the entire Constitution. They justify it upon the presumption that the people of Kansas would reject the entire project if presented to them; and thus they concede their determination to oust the Federal power to force upon the people an organic law to which they are clearly opposed.

Governor WALKER ignores, altogether, the Slavery question, and takes his stand against the action of the Constitutional Convention upon the ground that it strikes at the root of self-government. It is, in his view, no longer an issue between Slavery and Pro-Slavery, but between Republicanism and Despotism—between the rule of the majority, and the absolutism of the few.

You will remember that before he went to Kansas, in an argument which he made in a celebrated case in the Supreme Court, he took the ground that there was a wide distinction between the power to make laws and the power to make Governments. The former is a delegated power, and the latter the power of sovereignty which cannot be delegated. This doctrine Governor WALKER enunciated in his Kansas inaugural, and subsequently in his Topeka speech, which averted a revolution, and probably a bloody civil war.

Applying it to the affairs of Kansas, the doctrine asserts that the power to fasten a Constitution upon the people of the Territory could not be delegated to a Convention, or any other body. All a Convention could do was, as a Committee of the people, to frame a Constitution for their subsequent consideration and decision. The attempt of such a Convention to make a Constitution, and set it in operation without a fair reference to the people, is an attempt to exercise sovereign power, and so strikes at the very root of self-government, and violates the Federal Constitution.

But, independent of this vital issue of principle, the Constitution which the Kansas Convention have framed is obnoxious to a large majority of the people, on various points of detail. For instance, it provides for a State Bank, with "not less than two branches." It may have an hundred branches if it chooses, and so flood the country with its paper issues. Yet the people are forced to vote unanimously in favor of this provision, if they vote at all in the December election.

Another special reason why the Constitution should be submitted to the people, is the fact that full half the people of the Territory were disfranchised at the election of the delegates to the Convention, in consequence of the failure to carry out the provisions of the election law in regard to a census and registration of voters. The people were in no way at fault in this matter, and they only acquiesced in the meeting of the Convention at all, in the confident supposition that the difficulty would be corrected by their being allowed opportunity to vote upon the Constitution after it should be framed. The result of the Convention's action is to force on the Territory a Constitution from voting upon which a larger number of citizens have been excluded than the entire number of those who elected the 48 delegates who signed that instrument.

Again: the Constitution creates an absolute despot, in the shape of General CALHOUN, who, from the time of its adoption until the State Government goes into operation, is to preside over the destinies of the State, be sole judge of election returns, &c., &c. What a mockery is it to pretend that the people even thought of delegating to the Convention the right to set this prince over them, clothed for ever so brief a space with regal powers! It is notorious that, if a candidate for constable, the people would repudiate him. They generally believe him to be the author of the Oxford frauds, for which, and other good reasons, he is to the last degree obnoxious. Is it not the most elaborate mockery of the right of self-Government to compel twenty thousand voters to accept him as their ruler, when scarce a twentieth of the number would accord him their suffrages?

Attempt is made to sustain the arbitrary action of the Convention upon the argument, so often urged, as to the rights of minorities, and the necessity of protecting them! But this argument can have no application here. Majorities under a Republican form of Government make Constitutions to restrain themselves and protect minorities. It is a voluntary act on their part, in the exercise of the will of the majority. In the case of the Kansas Convention, the minority—and a very small minority at that—seeks to dictate to and force upon the majority, as fundamental organic law, just what the minority chooses to demand, and the majority refuses to yield! And as the minority confesses that it cannot maintain its monstrous imposition without external assistance, the national Administration proposes to exert the federal arms, if needs be, to force the yoke upon the necks of the so-he enslaved majority! Was there ever another stock instance in the history of republican government?

Governor WALKER is satisfied that no inducement can lead the mass of the people of Kansas to vote at the December election. They feel that their last hope of peacefully securing their rights is by giving one more proof that it is a ridiculously small minority which seeks to enslave them. They will organize Committees of Vigilance to protect the polls, and see that no votes are cast except by legal voters. As very few votes will be cast except by those who favor the Pro-Slavery clause in the Constitution, it will be carried. In this shape it will come to Congress, with perhaps three thousand votes out of the twenty thousand which the Territory should cast. It will thus be evident that only a small part of the people accept the Constitution as the organic law of the new State, and the question will then be presented directly to Congress whether or no it will admit Kansas into the Union with a Constitution against which the vast majority of her voters protest, and upon which it is notorious that they were refused opportunity to pass their verdict of condemnation at the ballot-box. The question will be whether Congress, at the bidding of a minority, is ready to force an obnoxious Constitution upon the majority.

This is the issue—and upon it the battle will be fought. It remains to be seen whether the President can sustain his position before Congress. He relies, of course, upon the united South; and it is possible that a judicious dispensation of the Federal patronage—carefully hoarded for this purpose—may enable him to secure votes enough among Northern members to give him a majority. I do not believe it: for however ready a man may be to run the risk of damage, for sake of compensation, where there is a reasonable chance of escaping annihilation, few can be found in political life to rush directly into the jaws of inevitable destruction, at any price.

I do not think that the President is quite so resolute in his determination to sustain the Convention as he was at first. There are indications that he begins to have some doubts of the policy,—although he has committed himself so deeply that it is difficult to see how he is to change front now. Southern men, who have opposed WALKER all along, express no gratitude for the President's present attitude. They suggest that the issue between him and the Governor of Kansas only relates to a matter of opinion, and not to any act of the Governor's; and they ask more earnestly than ever why Mr. BUCHANAN did not rebuke and remove him long ago, because of the speeches in which he led the people to take, with him, the very attitude which constitutes the basis of the present difference of opinion between him and the Executive. Views and Opinions of Senator Douglas.

CHICAGO, Thursday, Nov. 26, 1857.

Senator DOUGLAS has left home for Washington. He has talked with the utmost freedom upon political topics, and especially upon the Kansas question, with the many politicians who have sought his counsel. He says openly and uniformly that he intends to stand by the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and to insist on the right of the people to choose their own form of government, not only in the matter of Slavery—for he says we have had four years of negroes, and we want some legislation for the interests of white men—there are other questions in that Constitution besides the issue of Slavery, and they must be settled by the people of Kansas themselves. If the Constitution made at Lecompton is not the will of the people of the Territory, then he declares himself in favor of throwing that overboard, as the Topeka Constitution was upset, and referring back the whole subject of Constitution-making to the people of the Territory. He maintains that in this matter we have nothing to do with South or North, but must stand by the principles of the Nebraska-Kansas bill. The President was elected by the people, on the pledge that the actual settlers shall be protected in their right to form their own Constitution.

Mr. DOUGLAS has also expressed the opinion, from the statements in the public prints, that the Pro-Slavery men in Kansas have attempted a fraud upon the people. He has also repudiated with special emphasis, the doctrine recently set forth by the Washington Union, that the several States have no right to abolish Slavery within their own limits. If the ultraists of the South believe they can face the North upon any such platform as this, he declares his belief they will find themselves mistaken. He speaks in the highest terms of the course of Governor WALKER, of the sacrifices of comfort and interest he made in accepting that post, and of the absolute necessity of sustaining him.

Judge DOUGLAS thinks that if the Administration wish to have WALKER sustained they can effect it, but if they send in his name ostensibly to be approved, but really to be rejected, the Southern Senators will vote against him. He is more afraid of SLIDELL in this matter than of HUNTER. He thinks WISE has crushed out HUNTER in his letter. Mr. BUCHANAN, he is afraid, will indorse the bogus Constitution. He is tired of Kansas, and he will accept any mode of settlement that seems the speediest.

The Movements of the Democracy.

From the Philadelphia Press.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 29, 1857.

Opposition to the recent action of the Kansas Constitutional Convention is a growing feeling among the conservative National Democracy of the country.

The fair men and strict interpreters of the platform of the Cincinnati Presidential Convention and the Inaugural Address of Mr. BUCHANAN—those men, who stood steadily by Governor WALKER from the outset—are not in temper now to abandon the principle for which he and they have contended.

As the news arrives from the Northwest, the East, and from the great middle States, it is learned with certainty that the Democratic representatives in Congress will, as they have done during the existence of these Kansas troubles, yield obedience only to the will of the majority of the people of that Territory, as fairly expressed.

California and Illinois, Pennsylvania and Indiana, the North, the East and the West, the Northwest, and the Southwest, those who sustained the fight in the last Presidential contest will, if report be true, stand firmly together upon the ground taken in the present phase of the Kansas question by the Press, the Chicago Times, the Detroit Free Press, and the other principal Democratic presses of the country. Of course, the New-Orleans Delta, the Charleston Mercury, and the South, will continue in the course which they have heretofore pursued.

Shortly after the assembling of Congress and the organization of the House of Representatives, there will be, I learn, a resolution introduced—and if introduced, it will certainly be passed—calling on the President to furnish, if not incompatible with the public interest, all the information which he may possess of the affairs of Kansas, as communicated to him during the recess between the sessions.

When the response to this resolution is published, and it appears that the provisions of the Constitution in question are not made public, not known even to the Administration, the unfairness of the Convention will become so apparent as to draw down upon it the indignation and contempt of all honest men of whatever party.

Mr. BUCHANAN sees and converses with gentlemen of prominence in the party as they arrive, and these generally oppose the schedule of the Convention. Mr. WALKER, too, informs the Administration on many points of Kansas affairs, of which before they had imperfect and unreliable knowledge.

Kentucky Sentiment.

From the Louisville Democrat.

It is the duty of the Democratic Party to settle the affairs of Kansas by the straightforward policy they have laid down and pledged themselves to. The people of Kansas are to fix their own institutions, and are to have a fair opportunity to do it. * * * * It is unbecoming a great party to swerve from principle, from favor or resentment toward any party. It were infinitely better for the South to lose a dozen such States as Kansas than to allow even a suspicion that she had countenanced any fraud or juggling for her benefit. * * We are of opinion that the refusal to submit the Constitution entire to the popular vote will be fatal to its acceptance by Congress. * * * Kansas is not a State yet, and there is no sovereignty about the Convention. But if there was, the people are to settle the institutions of Kansas; not the people by a fiction of law, but the real people. * * * The Constitution is not submitted to the people, and no reason can be given for the omission, except the apprehension that it might be voted down. Will the other States run the risk of dragging a State into the Union that does not wish to come in on the conditions proposed? They cannot do it, and we may safely predict they will not do it.

News from Havana.

ARRIVAL OF THE QUAKER CITY—DECLINE IN SUGAR—FREIGHTS DULL.

The steamship Quaker City, Capt. SHUFELDT, from Mobile on the night of the 23d, and Havana at 5 P. M. on the 26th, arrived here last evening. She experienced very heavy weather nearly the whole passage. There is nothing new from Havana. The health of the City is perfect.

The stock of Sugars on hand is reported at 142,000 boxes. Prices have declined, but without any regularity in figures.

Exchange on New-York, short sight, 6 per cent. premium, 60 days at 2¾ to 3 per cent. premium. London, 10¾ to 11 per cent. premium.

In Freights there is no demand for large vessels. Those accepting from 600 to 2,000 boxes for Europe, have been taken up at from 22 6s. to 23 10s.

The Quaker City has only $12,000 in specie on freight from Havana.

FIRE AT STATE-STREET.—The residence of Mr. WILLIAM BOSS at State Stop, was entirely consumed by fire at six o'clock on Sunday morning. The furniture was all destroyed. Mr. Boss had a narrow escape. He is an English pensioner over 80 years of age, and had resided in the same house for sixty years.

THE MAYORALTY.

YOUNG MEN'S ANTI-WOOD MEETING.

Great Demonstration at the Stuyvesant Institute.

Last evening, pursuant to call, a large assemblage of the young men of New-York opposed to FERNANDO WOOD and in favor of DANIEL F. TIEMANN for Mayor, convened at the Stuyvesant Institute. The lecture room was crowded to overflowing. A large number of those unable to gain access to it organized meetings in front of the building and in the large appartment on the second floor.

The meeting proper was organized by Mr. D. W. GILDERSLEEVE, who submitted the annexed list of officers, which was unanimously adopted:

PRESIDENT—JOHN E. PARSONS.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

D. N. Hankins,	John F. Cook,	L. L. S. Clearman,
Geo. H. Hopkins,	Wm. E. Mooney,	Geo. W. Clarke,
Wm. B. Parsons,	Wm. M. Franklin,	James Lagan,
A. C. Van Wyck,	John J. Ennis,	Henry B. Hyde,
F. B. Van Buren,	Floyd Clarkson,	Charles L. Barnes,
John Bowne,	John L. Riker, Jr.,	John R. White,
Wm. H. Taylor,	Samuel Sands,	David E. Baldwin,
Cephas Brainerd,	Charles Curtis,	Wm. Price.

VICE SECRETARIES.

E. Robinson, Jr.,	Charles A. Moore,	Samuel Leeds,
Wm. F. Hyatt,	Mitchell Tyng,	Wm. H. Miller,
Harvey E. Wood,	Chas. T. Hodges,	F. A. Harper,
	Wm. H. Seymour,	James M. Parker.

The first speaker introduced was Mr. W. H. FAY, who was received with great applause. He alluded at some length to the importance of the issues to-day to be decided on, and proceeded to speak of FERNANDO WOOD's opposition to the recent Albany Legislation as the extreme of inconsistency. In one of his messages he recommended the adoption of regulations for the police force almost substantially similar to those enforced under the present Commission, and now he opposed the system simply because it was not under his exclusive control. No man of particular politics could bear upon the appointment of policemen now. But put the force into the hands of FERNANDO WOOD, and it would become a "Dead Rabbit" concern from turret to foundation. [Cheers.] Now, there was another point about this very election to which he wished to allude. Wood had himself recommended that the elections be changed, in Document No. 5, page 24. The only thing really different between the new charter and that which FERNANDO WOOD recommended was that the supreme power of the Police had been taken away from him, and that was where the shoe pinched. [Cheers.] It had been argued by a gentleman at Tammany Hall the other night that some of the Republican papers which had praised FERNANDO WOOD when he came into office were now his particular opponents. Why did they praise him then? Because they did not know that he had been in the California trade, and because he had made fair promises for the preservation of the peace and order of the City, which he had failed to perform. [Cheers.] And it was the duty of every citizen, when any man of good character came into office, no matter how much opposed to him in politics, to endeavor to do all that he could to assist him to promote order and good government. [Cheers.] Mr. WOOD, the other day, had read a homily on General WOOLL, and talked a good deal about the special man and the eternal to-morrow. He (the speaker) would say that they were going to assign that special man to the eternal to-morrow. [Cheers.] To-morrow would certainly be the first time in this country when a man against whom charges of forgery and perjury had been brought, which had never been denied by either himself or his friends, should come forward to seek reelection to a high and most responsible office. Now, if, of the 80,000 voters in this City a majority could be found to elect FERNANDO WOOD, he would not say what he thought of those 40,000 and odd voters. He would simply say as Mr. BUTTERWORTH of the Assay Office had said this afternoon, that he would not discharge any man for voting for FERNANDO WOOD, who was guilty of forgery, &c., but he would not trust him with the Bullion of the Assay Office. [Cheers.] It was a saying as old as the Latins, that "Birds of a feather flock together," and everybody who chose had now light to find out the darkness of FERNANDO WOOD. They could drag that rat out of the hole, very easily, if they but chose, and if they aimed with their eyes open then the [illegible] was that there was a majority in this City so [illegible] that they preferred a dishonest to an honest man in office. Wood had only 35,000 votes when last elected, and if the people opposed to him, now united, they could beat him at that figure by 10,000 of a majority. [Cheers.] He thought there was a God in Israel yet. The property in this City was of great amount. This island was one of the richest spots in the world, and let the people now protect their jewels from the Barbarians. And the poor people were even more in need of good government than the rich, for they were less able to meet the expenses and risks of bad government. New-York had not only a local influence, but she was the very fountain of political power. In this country the great things were not begun or designated originally at Washington, but at New-York. When BROOKS of South Carolina wanted to work a revolution, he said the first thing the South should do, would be to seize the federal treasury. At that time there was not $20,000 in the treasury at Washington, whilst there were $20,000,000 in New York. We had the sinews of war, and therefore we had the elemental forces of the diffusive energies of civilization. Let us, therefore, do our duty. Let us remember that every spot of our old island here is classic, that her early public men were men without shame and without reproach, whose intellect was equal to their patriotism, and who had given us a legacy of independence, of worth, and of sublimity, which we would be worse than parricidal if we allowed to slip unmoniously from our hands. [Loud cheers.]

Mr. R. C. MCCORMACK, Jr., submitted the annexed resolutions:

Whereas, It is preeminently the duty of young men to use every honorable exertion to prevent a continuation of the corrupt and extravagant Government now disgracing this, the chief City of the Republic. Therefore,

Resolved, That we cheerfully ignore all party lies, and support the people's candidate for Mayor, DANIEL F. TIEMANN, a citizen of honor, experience and acknowledged ability, in whose hands we may safely confide the most important municipal interests.

Resolved, That we will make practical our earnest support of Mr. TIEMANN, by urging our friends and neighbors to vote for him, and by attending at the polls, to insure, so far as in our power, a fair and honest balloting, which must inevitably result in his triumphant election.

PROFESSOR HOWARD CROSBY was presented by the Chairman amid loud cheers. The speaker who had preceded him, he said, had referred to a remarkable production of our worthy Mayor last Wednesday, in the neighborhood of Miss FLORA MCFLINSEY in Madison Square. He took for his motto the words, "I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him," and the same distinguished gentleman would forgive him (the professor) if he took his motto to-night, and said, "We have come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him." [Cheers.] To-morrow would be our Ides of March, and to-morrow our Cæsar would find a Brutus in every decent Democrat. [Cheers.] The Mayor's friends said he was a poor Job. They said he had endured the trials of his office and the persecutions of his enemies in such a remarkable manner, that he was a second Job. Well, they came together to-night as Job's comforters. [Laughter.] and he (the mayor) would tell them, doubtless, to-morrow night, "Miserable comforters are ye all!" [Cheers.] FERNANDO WOOD had been elected to office in order to give him a chance of reforming himself as well as the city, and he had disappointed the hopes of his best friends. The people had now a serious work before them. Then on the morrow let them do their duty. Let them be faithful to the pledges which they had so promptly given; let the city's pride stimulate them to work, and let the city's prosperity be their reward. [Loud cheers.]

Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS was received with applause The time for argument, he said, had passed, and the time for action had arrived. He hoped that the gentlemen in control of this meeting would send the assemblage decently and early home, in order that each man might be at his post at sunrise to-morrow. He reviewed FERNANDO WOOD's opposition to the recent legislation for the City, and declared that the present Charter agreed substantially with that recommended by the Mayor himself. And as to the Police Bill, against which he (Mr. BROOKS) had reluctantly voted, it would never have been passed if FERNANDO WOOD, acting at the head of the old Police force, had been an honest, upright, faithful public officer. He had removed from that force American citizens, born in the City of New-York, and, not simply content with putting other men in their places, he put the very worst men of his own party in their places. Among his (Mr. B's) constituents he was compelled to witness a scene of disgrace like this: Four American-born sergeants of police had the honorable badges of sergeants of police torn from their breasts, and those marks of honor placed upon the breasts of four poor Irishmen distinguished only as the supporters of FERNANDO WOOD. And he (Mr. B.) had said then and said now of FERNANDO WOOD, that whenever and wherever he placed himself as a candidate for public position, he would be there to oppose him. [Loud cheers.] Mr. BROOKS expressed his readiness, though a devoted American, to forget for the moment all political distinctions, and, taking a Republican by his right hand and a Democrat by his left, to go forward and sweep FERNANDO WOOD out of the position which he disgraced. [Loud cheers.]

Mr. CHAUNCEY SCHAFFER was the next speaker. He was received with warm applause. During the last week, he said, he had talked so much about FERNANDO WOOD that he was afraid of corrupting his own morals by saying anything more about him. [Cheers and Laughter.] And, moreover, he felt, as did the gentleman who had last addressed them, that the time for talking was about past, and the time for action had arrived. Was there a man so deaf that he was not able to hear thunder? [Laughter.] Was there a man so blind that he could not see lightning, especially when it struck him on the snout? [Laughter.] Was there a man so completely betrayed that he would acknowledge FERNANDO WOOD to be a fit and proper person to be Mayor of the City of New-York? If there was, he would not defend that man on a charge of petty larceny for all the money that he and Wood could steal for six months. [Great laughter.] Mr. SCHAFFER entered at length into the charges of forgery and perjury against FERNANDO WOOD in connection with MARVINE and other affairs, and reasserted with much emphasis, his relations with Wood when the latter, as a Know-Nothing, was endeavoring to obtain the nomination of that party for Mayor. Mr. SCHAFFER was repeatedly and enthusiastically cheered.

When Mr. SCHAFFER had retired there were loud cries for Mr. CUTTING, but he was not there, and Mr. PETER Y. CUTLER was announced in his stead. He said he arose without the slightest preparation. But he felt it necessary that some one belonging to the same party as the gentleman who had been called for, should appear on such an occasion. He was there as a Democrat. He intended to vote the Democratic ticket to-morrow, and in doing so he should vote for DANIEL F. TIEMANN for Mayor of the City of New-York. He was a Democrat, and did not believe FERNANDO WOOD could receive a nomination from the Democratic Party. He might receive a nomination from those who would vote for the "devil incarnate," as one of Mayor WOOD's friends had said the Democratic Party should do. [Laughter.] But he did not belong to that portion of the party, and would not, if he knew it, vote for his Satanic Majesty for Mayor of New-York. [Applause.] He had voted for FERNANDO WOOD. There was a time when he thought he would make a very good Mayor. But that time had passed. He had been mistaken; but that was because he did not know the man. He had supposed that he had been regularly nominated by a Committee of respectable gentlemen, and on that recommendation he had supported him as a Democrat—but, as he had said, he had been mistaken. Mayor WOOD had proved to be a very different man from what he had once supposed him to be. Instead of acting for the good of the people, he had so managed that scarcely a contract could be confirmed unless the party seeking the contract were willing to pay for it. But there was no time to review his official conduct then. As had been said, the time for talking had passed, it was now the time for work, and they must work earnestly. They must vote themselves and they must induce others to vote.

When he had retired Mr. WOODWORTH was announced. He hardly knew that he was called upon to say anything. The case reminded him of the story of the Irishman and the Jew, who went out together in a boat to fish. By some accident the Jew tumbled overboard and went down. When he came up the Irishman caught him by the collar and cried out "Do you belave in Jasus?" The saturated Jew said "No!" "Then down ye'll go again," said PAT; and down he thrust him again. After he had held him down a long time he pulled him up, and again asked him, "Do you belave in Jasus?" The Jew again said, "No." PAT thrust him down again, and kept him there until he was almost dead, then brought him up and repeated the question. The Jew then answered, "Yes, he did believe." Then said PAT, "Down you go to glory, while you're in the faith," and down he thrust the Jew. That was what he believed would be the result of to-morrow night. Mayor WOOD taking the place of the Jew, and the people that of the Irishman. He continued at some length, urging them to vote for Mr. TIEMANN, and to use all their influence with their friends to make them vote for him, and then gave way to

Mr. JAMES FITZMAN, who appeared, he said, as one of the workingmen, and as such he intended to meet FERNANDO WOOD on the morrow, believing him to be the greatest enemy of the workingman. In proof of [illegible] Mr. FAIRMAN had concluded, the calls for SICKLES were loud and long.

Mr. SICKLES responded to the call. He said he was glad to have an opportunity of meeting with the young men of New-York. It was true he had appeared late, but that was not because he did not desire to be with them. It was because he had been busy elsewhere, working for their interest—where the services of a soldier in the cause were more needed than in Stuyvesant Institute. [Applause.] They were he said, on the eve of the battle—the battle that was to release them from the robberies and corruptions of the last three years. He had had some experience in political matters, and on the responsibility of that he would assure them that victory would as certainly perch upon their banners to-morrow as that the sun would go down. He knew that when they went out from the Hall they would hear of the vaunts of the friends of Mayor WOOD. That was one of his tricks, and his bravos had learned it well. But he could tell them that the City was going to vote by ballot to-morrow, and no man without a heart could judge of what the feelings of the people were on this occasion. Therefore, FERNANDO WOOD, having no heart, could not judge correctly of what the people were about to do. [Applause.] The last manœuvre of WOOD was the richest one of all. It was to cause it to be stated publicly that the Administration at Washington desired the success of Mayor WOOD, in order to save the Union—[laughter and great applause.]—and that those of the Democratic Party who opposed him should have their heads cut off. That was the last card of a political gamester, and if he understood the hearts of the people, they would hurl it back upon him with indignation and contempt. [Great applause.] Much had been said about the invasion of the City's rights by the last Legislature at Albany. He believed they had been invaded, but nevertheless, he had rather have an invasion from Albany than from Washington. [Cheers.] But it was useless to waste time and invective upon such an invasion. There was no such interference intended. It was a slander on the character of JAMES BUCHANAN, to say that he would interfere with the election of these Aldermen and Supervisors. But, in proof of that assertion, an article from the Washington Union had been extensively quoted in the City during the day. Now he would assume, then, that the Washington Union never was, is not, and never would be, the organ of JAMES BUCHANAN. To attempt to impose upon a portion of our fellow-citizens such a statement, only deserves to be characterized as an outrage upon the people of New-York. He had only to say that the entire statement was false, and that it would have no effect upon those for whom it was intended.

Mr. SICKLES retired amid great applause, and the meeting adjourned.

The Election To-Day.

The first election under the amended Charter of the City of New-York takes places to-day. By section 51 of that instrument the Mayor, Aldermen and Councilmen are to be elected on the first Tuesday in December, this year, and (§ 52) hereafter the annual election for Charter officers, School officers and Governors of the Almshouse will be held on the first Tuesday in December.

The principal interest centres to-day in the selection of a Chief Magistrate for the City, who (§ 19) is to be elected for the term of two years. The successful candidate for this office, in common with the other Charter officers, will enter upon his duties on the first January next. (§ 52.)

The members of the Board of Aldermen (§ 3) are classified as follows: "The Aldermen from districts having an odd numerical designation, shall hold such office for the term of one year, and those from districts having an even numerical designation, shall hold such office for the term of two years. At all subsequent elections for Aldermen, they shall be elected for the full term of two years." The City (§ 30) is divided into seventeen Aldermanic Districts. Hitherto we have elected twenty-two Aldermen at each election. The President of the Board of Aldermen (§ 17) is acting Mayor during the absence or disability from any cause of the Chief Magistrate.

Twenty-four Councilmen, six from each Senatorial District of the City (§ 4), are to be elected to-day. They are chosen for one year.

The other City officers to be elected are Police Justices and Civil Justices for each of the (8) Judicial Districts. The new charter does not alter the law under which they are chosen.

A Governor of the Almshouse is to be elected to-day, and the new Board of Supervisors, consisting of twelve members. By the new law only six of these are to be voted for on one ticket. The six candidates who shall receive the highest vote will be declared elected, and the next six highest are to be appointed as the Ten Governors are. The result of this rule in the present instance will probably be to constitute a Board, one portion of whose members will be of a different stripe of politics from their colleagues.

The Provisions of the Metropolitan Police Act concerning elections should be borne in mind to-day. It is the duty of the Board of Police (§ 21) to detail at least two patrolmen to each election poll. It is to be hoped that a much larger force will be on duty at each poll. Any person who "publicly keeps or dispenses of" any intoxicating liquors upon election day, is liable to a fine of $50. By the same section it is made unlawful to erect any booth or box for the distribution of tickets within one hundred and fifty feet of any polling place. Any person (§ 21) who uses personal violence, without just cause, upon any elector, or upon any policeman in the discharge of his duty, or fraudulently represents himself to be a policeman, is deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and is punishable with imprisonment in the Penitentiary for not less than one or more than two years, or by a fine of not less than $250. Any Policeman who neglects to make an arrest for an offence against the law, committed in his presence, is liable to the same penalties.

Mayor Wood and President Buchanan—Note from Mr. Bradburst.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of this morning I perceive that I am quoted by your Washington correspondent as having heard from Mr. FERNANDO WOOD the words, "Mr. BUCHANAN is a heartless old scoundrel, &c." I would beg to say that these were not precisely Mr. WOOD's words. Let me relate to you the real circumstances: Mr. BUCHANAN, towards the latter part of last March, just after the Federal appointments for New-York had been made, was passing, on foot, by Willard's Hotel. Mr. RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, at present County Clerk, and myself, were sauntering near the ladies' door of the Hotel, on the side street. Mr. FERNANDO WOOD came out from the hotel at the ladies' door, and joined us. "How is your Honor," said Mr. CONNOLLY. Before any reply was made I said, "A gentleman just passed down the street, perhaps in search of yourself, Mr. WOOD."

WOOD replied, "Who was that?"

I answered, "No less a person than JAMES BUCHANAN."

Mr. WOOD—"He be d——d; I would not be seen walking on the same side of the street with him; he is a d——d scoundrel."

This was Mr. WOOD's answer to me. The profanity your readers must be kind enough to excuse, for it is after the most daguerreotype fashion, Mr. WOOD's own property and language, and not mine. Had not your Washington correspondent referred to the matter I should have remained silent; but, particularly on the eve of an election like that which will take place to-morrow, it is best that the precise truth should be known. That Mr. WOOD was notoriously inimical to Mr. BUCHANAN was well known in Washington, is not forgotten now, and never will pass away from the memory of the President himself.

SAMUEL BRADBURST.

A Card from the City Inspector.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Rumors having reached me of reports being circulated that my influence (whatever little I may possess) is being exerted in a "passive" way for FERNANDO WOOD as Mayor in the election of to-morrow, I deem it but justice to myself to say that all such rumors are totally unfounded. All the influence and ability that I may have, has been and will be exerted to elect DANIEL F. TIEMANN, the People's Candidate, as Mayor of this City, believing him from his past private as well as official life, most eminently calculated to adorn the position of Chief Magistrate of this City.

Respectfully, &c.,

GEORGE W. MORTON.

The Mayor's Office and Bogus Work.

The Herald of Sunday contains an affidavit of PATRICK BOYLE, one of the workmen of the Assay Office. The allegation in that affidavit—that the foreman "stated to the men that all who voted for FERNANDO WOOD for Mayor, on Tuesday next, might consider themselves discharged,"—is, I learn, untrue. The foreman had no authority to dismiss any of the men, and could not have made the threat attributed to him.

It is true that, in giving directions to the foreman for the disposition of the men on the day of election, I said that this office would not be closed, but that the men must report themselves early; and I added that I had just read my friend COCHRANE's report of WOOD's dealings with MARVINE, and that, in my judgment, any one who approved of WOOD's mode of doing business, as developed in that report, was not a safe man to handle bullion. So I still think. The men of this office are most of them intelligent mechanics, and cannot be influenced by a per diem consideration to vote against their inclinations. Certainly no attempt will be made by any one connected with this office to coerce them.

U. S. ASSAY-OFFICE, Nov. 30, 1857.

Letter from Mr. R. F. Carman.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The statement published in the New-York Times, of this day, purporting to be made by EDWARD KELLY, to the effect that I had declared, on Friday morning, "that Mayor WOOD was a scoundrel, &c., and that I would not vote for him under any circumstances," is entirely without foundation. I do not know this Mr. KELLY, nor have I ever entertained any but feelings of respect for Mr WOOD, and have intended from the first to give him my support. His statement is false in all respects.

Very respectfully yours,

RICHARD F. CARMAN.

It is due to ourselves to say, that we did not publish Mr. KELLY's letter until we had received the written assurance of a prominent and reliable gentleman of this City, that he "knew Mr. KELLY to be a truthful and most respectable man." Having published his statement, we of course give place, also, to Mr. CARMAN's denial.

Thomas Butler King's Name.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

DEAR SIR: I notice the name of Hon. T. BUTLER KING was used as a Vice-President at the Wood Meeting held in the Academy of Music. I beg to say it was done without his consent. Mr. KING left the New-York Hotel on the 5th of November, for New-Orleans, and reached there in due time, is there now, and will be till dec. 6, at the St. Charles Hotel. As I am in correspondence with him, I state these facts. I would further state it is my intention to vote for Mr. TIEMANN. I have always turned a deaf ear to the charges against Mayor WOOD, but I cannot close my eyes to this last act of deception.

I am dear, Sir, your obd't serv't,

JOHN FREDRICKS.

HOUSTON-STREET, Nov. 30, 1857.

Vehement Appeal on Behalf of Mayor Wood.

The following circular exhortation, which sounds amazingly like satire, has been widely scattered throughout the City:

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Nov. 28, 1857.

DEAR SIR: We call upon you to sustain the right! As an independent and honest man, we ask your support for another independent and honest man.

Mayor WOOD has discharged his public duties with fidelity and ability. He has imparted to the Office of Mayor dignity of character, integrity of purpose, and a clear perception of the interests of the people!

With rare courage and sagacity he successfully resisted the efforts to degrade his office and usurp the municipal authority of New-York. In this resistance he hazarded fortune, liberty, and life itself! Shall he be sustained? Although elected last year for two years, the same Legislature, which so much distinguished itself by open corruption and illegal encroachments upon your corporate privileges, has sought to remove him in one year, by making his term expire in January next. Do not permit it! Rebuke this unwarrantable and unjust curtailment of his term.

Vote the inclosed ticket, and call upon your friends and neighbors to vote likewise. Do not omit voting because you deem his election sure. Give him such a majority as will not only do him justice, but for [illegible]

[illegible] signed to this without his authority, and there is no such name as "William F. Wauman" on the Advisory.

Mr. Snow's name, as we have already stated, was signed to this without his authority, and there is no such name as "William F. Wauman" on the Advisory.

Medical Bearings of the Election.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

An anonymous communication circulated as was falsely to appear as if signed by a Committee of Bellevue Hospital, is being circulated by the friends of FERNANDO WOOD amongst regular physicians, the evening before election to induce them to vote against Mr. TIEMANN, on the ground that as Governor of the Almshouse he has favored Homœopathy. Though sincerely opposed to that system professionally, knowing Mr. TIEMANN personally as an enlightened honest citizen, we have patriotically enough at this alarming crisis to vote for him for a subordinate office, if he were HAHNEMANN himself. If any [illegible] of the regular profession really notice this contemptible trick and believe the story true, the very best way to get rid of Mr. T. as Governor of the Hospital is to elect him Mayor.

A REGULAR PHYSICIAN.

An Affecting Appeal on Behalf of Mayor Wood.

TO REGULAR PHYSICIANS.—Mr. DANIEL F. TIEMANN is a warm advocate for the introduction of Homœopathic physicians into Bellevue Hospital in place of the regular physicians now in attendance at that institution. He was one of the first movers in this matter, and is still one of the most [illegible] prejudiced members of the Board of Governors of the Almshouse in this Homœopathic [illegible] the truth of the above fact, you are respectfully referred to Professors SMITH, MATHEWS, BARTLETT, PARKER, Drs. ANTHONY BUCHER,
Committee on Bellevue Hospital.

What Mr. Butterworth Did Not Know.

The Herald of yesterday contains an affidavit of PATRICK BOYLE, one of the workmen of the Assay Office. The allegation in that affidavit that the foreman "stated to the men that all who voted for FERNANDO WOOD for Mayor, on Tuesday next, might consider themselves discharged," is, I learn, untrue. The foreman had no authority to dismiss any of the men, and could not have made the threat attributed to him.

U. S. ASSAY OFFICE, Nov. 30, 1857.

ARRANGEMENTS OF THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—The Police Commissioners yesterday were busy. They visited many of the Station-Houses, examined and swore in a large number of special policemen to do duty at the polls to-day. The Commissioners, it will be remembered, resolved to appoint 2,000 of these. The complement is full. Each of the Special Policemen will have furnished him a badge, shield and

The uniformity of these latter as a currency basis is self-evident. So far, indeed, from being transient, the metals are fluctuating as a buoy beside the Eddystone Light. They lack all the stability, equality, and invariability indispensable to a perfect standard. A bad season for cotton depletes a luckless farm for the gold-finder; may alter their value fifty per centum. They are subject to sudden destruction, as in the case of the Central America. They are subject to loss, theft, and each, even surviving accidents, without the means of indemnification and recovery. They are subject to [illegible] loss; the constant loss by attrition in the circulation of gold coin, equalling, it has been [illegible] a European rate of interest upon the total amount of gold in circulation. And to obtain these metallic symbols, worthless as they are as [illegible] as they are to handle, costly as they are to transport, wasteful as they are [illegible] and wear, and tear, we pay millions [illegible] the national resources, maintaining [illegible] establishments to divide, multiply, and [illegible] them fantastically for popular use, and [illegible] of some hundred millions of capital in the form of [illegible] metal, which if actively employed in trade [illegible] about revenue sufficient in a few years [illegible] the entire debt of the several [illegible] that so-called standard, at [illegible] commercially as to be engrossed [illegible] the very scarcity and [illegible] which begets the preference [illegible] on the one hand, and [illegible] for it on the other, are the [illegible] fictitious and conventional [illegible] of the world [illegible] gold and silver in [illegible] would so disturb [illegible] the rest of the world [illegible] to the same policy; and left to merely mechanical applications, gold would [illegible] slightly the market price of copper [illegible] less than 5%. In those days [illegible] become too common and base for [illegible] purposes.

The [illegible] of value in real estate, and the opportunities for error and fraud that experience has shown it to present, as a guaranty of currency render its use as objectionable as that of the metals. Personal property is evidently still less acceptable. The stocks and securities of individual States, or of counties, or of municipal or business corporations and associations, are of too uncertain value, dependent as they are upon sources of information to which the bulk of mankind have no satisfactory access, to meet with universal acceptance and credit. Their validity is necessarily local; their market value too variable to afford a monetary standard. Need I say that a National Bank, into the institution of which the specie element, and the various securities which give so little steadiness to our present currency, would enter, and which would inevitably become the shuttle-cock of party, and be driven to bankruptcy under the pressure of a hostile executive, is in my mind the most faulty project of all? In all sincerity, I believe there is but one course left us; and that is, returning to the starting point, to rest our currency upon

THE TRUE BASIS,

—the faith of the National Government. I propose, my dear Sir, a radical reform. The creation of a currency I hold to be—and until the present vicious system of banking was contrived, was universally held to be—one of the loftiest functions of the legislative office. It should be an inseparable prerogative of the supreme power in the State, delegated as occasion may require, but under such stringent limitations as to secure that largest measure of public safety and advantage which it is the mission of government to confer, and the neglect of which is such an abdication of functions as authorizes revolution. An omission to assure such safety is indeed a wrong far more deserving of vituperative denunciation than WOOD's farthings, which awoke the wrath of the Drapier: a gigantic outrage, greater by the ratio of guineas to halfpence. Yet legislative neglect subjects this entire people to insecurity, in regard to the circulating medium. Partial security is certainly attempted by the inconsistent and ill-considered legislation of a few States. In a few, as in New-York, the system faintly suggests the correct theory of Government faith; in others, the security is illusory, and therefore a positive injury to those it assumes to protect; elsewhere the bill-holder is wholly at the mercy of an irresponsible stockholder. Everywhere, however, the specie basis lies at the foundation; and even in your State, where the evil presents itself in its least exceptionable shape, we find the Banking Department powerless where the recusant issuers of promises to pay strengthen each other by collusions in their repudiation. It deals vigorously with single spies; but it is impotent in the face of battalions. Not more vexatious, though far less injurious, was the German Customs system, before the Zollverein swept away the web of petty toll-gates, at which each principling gathered his peculiar revenue, than the confused legislation of the separate States of our union upon banking and currency. What we want is a monetary system as broad, comprehensive, safe, and liberal as our governmental scheme itself, and with faith and validity consubstantial with our institutions. We want every pretended representative of money to be as universally respected and accepted as a Government bond, or Treasury note, and to cost as little, that we may no longer imprison millions in ponderous metallic bars, in order to possess a mere convenience of exchange, which is clumsy, inconvenient, and mischievous after all. At first sight the easiest way of approaching these desirable results would seem to be the creation of a national fiscal agent, with the power of issuing circulation under the federal guaranty, such paper to be substituted for gold and silver as a legal tender. This measure, with the discontinuance of the metallic coinage, would point in the right direction. Such fiscal agent, however, would be open to the same class of objections as a National Bank, though in a minor degree, as being merely a medium of circulation, not of deposit and discount. It would be subject to contradictory political control; it would become the instrument of party; and before a partisan onslaught might at any moment be prostrated, and public confidence with it. It certainly would not put an end to the promiscuous and insecure banking systems of the several States. And, what at present is a fatal objection, the party now ruling in national politics, is prescriptively pledged against any institution of the sort. Again, the plan of government directly stamping its guaranty upon paper, as it now stamps it upon metals, and issuing paper instead of metallic coinage, is apparently practicable. It is needless to say that a Government like ours, capable of issuing $68,000,000 of stocks and bonds, and finding a world market for them far above par, has credit sufficient to issue the same order of securities in the fractional form of dollars, their multiples and divisions. The ability to owe indefinitely and without demand, so long as interest is duly paid, is peculiar to States of first-rate magnitude. Bullion is worth no more than the scrip by which the British Government admits its indebtedness to the bearer in the sum of £5, and yet the British Government owes £800,000,000, the prompt payment of which is a financial impossibility. The credit of the American Government is far less questionable, as it possesses a landed domain exceeding in value the wildest expansion of the circulating medium. On the score of reliability, therefore, the paper acknowledgment of indebtedness might pass as readily as the precious metals, to which common consent, and not intrinsic worth, as I have observed, gives currency; but, nevertheless, the direct issue of such scrip by Government, in sums small enough to meet all the exigencies of traffic, would be surrounded by a host of objections, many of which cannot fail to impress the reader. I must limit myself to the general one, that the immensity of the patronage thus added to the Federal Government, and the room thus unquestionably opened for jobbing and official profligacy, would render such accession of power most mischievous.

HOW TO INAUGURATE A BETTER SYSTEM.

A literal construction of the Constitution would seem to assign Congress all the authority requisite to control the national currency. It is empowered "to regulate the commerce among the several States," "to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin;" and by the prohibition (Sec. X., Art. 1) to the several States of the rights to "coin money, emit bills of credit, and make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts," there is implied power in Congress to do any and all of these things. But in the usage of the individual States in regard to paper currency, it is obvious that the institution of banks of issue is practically held to be a reserved right of the separate sovereignties, the relinquishment of which is only to be effected by further constitutional provision. It may be readily introduced. The fourth article of the eighth section contains the clause:

"Congress shall have power * * to establish * * uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States."

A power so mischievously construed and exercised (within our recollection as to render its erasure from the organic law a duty of the highest importance. I may be over sanguine in supposing that the adoption of my currency scheme will effectually prevent a recurrence of the abnormal condition of affairs which was supposed to sanction the extraordinary act of 1842. At all events, let the word "banking" replace, in the paragraph cited, the word "bankruptcies," and we at once find Congress invested with undoubted authority to accomplish all we ask. The mode of exercising that authority is the momentous question, the solution of which, I conceive, lies in the passage of two simultaneous acts, viz:

1. An Act authorizing the construction of a railroad connecting the Mississippi with the Pacific Ocean, granting for that object the credit of government to any competent corporation that shall offer the most advantageous terms for the loan. If the estimated cost of construction reach, as is anticipated, $200,000,000 to three-fourths of that sum, or $150,000,000, let Federal bonds be issued, a far more judicious and economical mode of affording aid than by a monstrous land grant, under which all the speculative appreciation of lands along the route inures to the advantage of private capitalists. The Company will, of course, be bound, by a proper lien upon the road and its furniture, to pay such rate of interest as the bonds indicate upon their face; a payment to be made in part by the transportation of mails, military stores and troops. The arrangements, details, and securities of such a bill will suggest themselves to the committee intrusted with its preparation.

2. An act abolishing the existing banking system, as authorized by State laws, and erecting a federal system in its stead, with these leading characteristics.

A CIRCULATION SECURED CENT PER CENT BY GOVERNMENT BONDS.

A superintendency of Banking in the Treasury Department, with subordinate offices, for the sake of convenience, at the several Sub-Treasury offices in the country.

The issue of such circulation to any Banks incorporated by State laws, who shall deposit an equivalent with the Superintendent in Federal bonds.

The issue of such circulation in [illegible] answering to the various denominations now expressed by bank bills, and gold and silver coinage.

The substitution of such money as a legal tender for gold and silver.

The adaptation of the Sub-Treasury act to the new currency.

The discontinuance of the several mints and assay offices.

Provisions accommodating the machinery of Government in all its details to the new order of things.

That such provisions would have to be extended from time to time by further legislation before all the requirements of the new system would be completely met is more than probable. Considering the active demand for Federal stock as an object of investment in trust estates and otherwise, it is quite sure that $150,000,000 of bonds would be insufficient to sustain the necessary paper emissions. Authorities differ so widely as to limits of expansion reached by the circulating medium at periods of great commercial activity, that it is difficult to select a fair average estimate. It certainly lies somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000,000; and should the stock issue of $150,000,000 prove inadequate upon trial, it will be easy to find grand national enterprises to which the aid of the Government credit may be wisely extended. So long as there is an Isthmus of Tehuantepec, at Panama, at Darien, unsevered by a ship canal; while there is but one line of railroad to the Pacific Ocean instead of a Northern, Middle and Southern, as is contemplated; so long as we are unpossessed, as a maritime power, of naval dépôts and ports of shelter and rendezvous in those quarters of the world most frequented by our commerce; while Cuba is unpurchased, and Mexico but partially dismembered, we cannot lack objects for the judicious application of the Federal credit.

ADVANTAGES OF THE BETTER SYSTEM.

By these successive steps, then—namely, an amendment of the Constitution where amendment is most needed, and two or three simple and feasible acts of Congress—we attain certain all-important results:

A secure and immovable foundation for the currency.

We no longer stamp the expression of Government faith upon precious metals costing annually millions of capital, that detained at home and legitimately employed would duplicate themselves in a twelvemonth.

We stamp it upon paper, or, if invention can supply it, some less expensive material, and so liberate those hundred millions of dead and perishing capital now locked up in gold and silver.

A bank note will be of equal value everywhere; the shaving thereof, and all ruinous differences in exchange, all the cost of transporting and insuring bullion and specie, all the risk of losing great sums of money without clue to retrace and recover them, cease to exist.

We gain the completion of several stupendous public improvements, the direct profit and indirect benefit of which will enrich the nation far beyond any imaginary sacrifice in procuring them.

Commerce will be the gainer in the possession of a portable money, the worth and safety of which will render it current in foreign as well as domestic transactions, and which will be far less subject to relative fluctuations than specie, and therefore more nearly a standard of comparison in the appraisement of its commodities.

The Government bonds will supply a most desirable object of sale and unquestionable investment, now wholly wanting to the American public, but which the most timid and ignorant Englishman possesses.

Mankind will be the gainer in the example thus set, and the first step thus taken in the banishment of a barbarous and unwieldy material of money.

And in the possession of a large national debt, so divided in the form of a dependent currency as to render every man in the country pecuniarily interested in the conservation of the Government, we have, perhaps, the highest advantage of all; an assurance, beyond fear, of the integrity and perpetuation of this happy union of States. You will perceive at a glance how widely I differ from those officers of the Treasury who present themselves periodically in the stock-market, and buy up the Federal loans at a ruinous premium. I have no horror of a national debt. If the interest can be provided for without addition to public burdens, I regard it as the source of unspeakable benefit. With the example of the British debt, and its conservative influence upon the English Constitution before my eyes, I cannot close them to the conviction that nothing can furnish the wanting element of cohesion to our Confederacy but the power of money, that pecuniary hold upon the allegiance of subjects, compared with which patriotism, loyalty, and partisan conservatism are ropes of sand. I would bind over every man and woman in the country by the amount of cash in their several pockets, or anticipated from earnings or other revenue, to the support of the Government and the Union. The agitator, dissolutionist, and extremist, southern or northern, should be peremptorily debarred from the hope and countenance of abetting factions by this insuperable barrier of self-interest. And that the adoption of my plan involves all of these fortunate results, without adding to the popular burdens, a due consideration of the details must evince, and hence the confidence I justly feel in its security.

For the present, however, I have trespassed abundantly upon your faith and patience, and must postpone more minute developments until occasion or controversy calls for them. I am conscious that without the array of figures, facts, statistics and arguments, with which some considerable investigation has strengthened my positions, and which the exigencies of newspaper space forbid me to introduce at present, my views may in some points lack that circumstantial demonstration which they really admit of. Have the goodness to believe so, and also that I shall be gratified with any opportunity of meeting a fair controversialist, and making good my case against all opponents. With sincere respect, my dear Sir, yours, CALHOUN.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 16, 1857.

CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA.

The War Between Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

We gave yesterday, in our Central American correspondence, particulars of the outbreak that has recently occurred between Nicaragua and Costa Rica. Among the official documents sent us by our correspondent were letters from Col. CAUTY, commander of the River San Juan, demanding, on the part of Costa Rica, the surrender of that river and its forts from the Nicaraguan authorities. The following additional documents will throw some further light on the subject, and will be read with interest. We subjoin, in the first place, the Nicaraguan acceptance of the Costa Rican declaration of war:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA.
MANAGUA, Oct. 19, 1857.

To the Prefect of the Department of ——:

The Supreme Executive has directed me to announce through this office the following decree:

Considering that the concessions of the Government of this Republic have not been sufficient to satisfy the expectations of that of Costa Rica, and to prevent hostile operations which have for their end the expropriation of the River San Juan, the Lake, and the Isthmus between San Juan del Sur and La Virjen, and which have been put in execution so that the whole line of the Transit may fall into its power.

In view of the dispatch dated Aug. 5, directed to the Minister of Relations of that Republic, conceding to his Government the District of Guanacaste, and of the right bank of the River San Juan, from two miles below Castillo to Point Castilla (Greytown.)

And the Captain of the steamer San Carlos, Mr. G. CAUTY, having threatened the blockade of the Fort of San Carlos, and demanded the surrender of the public force which has the custody of it, by order of the Comandante-General of the Republic of Costa Rica, as appears from the official note of said Captain, directed to the commander of that fort, a copy of which accompanies this; it is therefore decreed:

ARTICLE 1. Nicaragua will accept the war which the Government of Costa Rica has made against her, and will vindicate her outraged rights, perfidiously violated by the conduct of that Government.

ART. 2. The Government of Nicaragua will preserve intact its rights to all the line of the transit from San Juan del Norte, by the river and lake, to San Juan del Sur; as also those which it holds in the District of Guanacaste, its lands, woods and rivers.

ART. 3. The Government will proceed to raise the necessary force to carry into effect the directions of the present decree.

ART. 4. Communicate the foregoing to the proper officers. Dated in Managua, Oct. 19, 1857.

TOMAS MARTINEZ,
MAXIMO JEREZ.

The following are the proclamations of General MARTINEZ upon the Costa Rican declaration of war:

TOMAS MARTINEZ, General of Division, and in Chief of the Army of the Republic.

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN: Inasmuch as the views of the Government of Costa Rica cover designs easily penetrated, the Government of this Republic had abstained from offering explanations that might offend the delicate susceptibility of its friend and ally. But the press has exposed these views, the Governments of Her Britannic Majesty, and of the United States of North America, have revealed these designs, and the acts of the actual Costa Rican Government have placed them beyond doubt.

The Government of Costa Rica, with the ostensible view of assisting Nicaragua in the defence of the independence of the country, possessed itself of Castillo Viejo; it dismissed from that point the fiscal employe of the Nicaraguan Government; it assumed the sovereignty of the waters of the river and the lake, under the trust of the Republic, for the purpose of blockading the Fort of San Carlos; and lastly, it captured the Nicaraguan passenger boats to San Juan del Norte. It placed forces in Tortuga, and it threatens to occupy the neighboring towns to consummate the complete usurpation of the Transit line, and hand it over to WENSTER, HARRIS and MORGAN, the filibusters, fast friends of WALKER.

The Governments of the other States, becoming aware of these circumstances, that of Salvador has offered its mediation, which Nicaragua accepts, with the hope of arriving at a pacific termination of the present question; and the Commissioner is momentarily expected. He, doubtless, to a certain extent, will be listened to by the Government of Costa Rica, as all the States have an equal interest in preventing all disturbances that might afford filibusterism the desired opportunity to strike a decisive blow against the independence of Central America.

But if Costa Rica does not restrain herself at the imperious voice of reason and national polity, it is necessary that the Nicaraguans repress her audaciousness and arrogance, and defend the integrity of the Republic.

The fratricide which the Government of that Republic seeks to commit, will cover it with opprobrium; the defence which you ought to make of your rights will cover you with glory—but if you falter, theirs will be the glory, yours the shame.

For my own part, placed at the head of the army of the Republic, by a decree of the 20th inst., I march to Granada to engage seriously in the operations of the war, which, notwithstanding our sentiments of fraternity, we have accepted as the only means of salvation which remain to us after the late events. Union will make us strong, and justice will give us the victory over the unjust aggressor. Such is the conviction of your countryman and friend,

TOMAS MARTINEZ.

MANAGUA, Oct. 22, 1857.

THE GENERAL-IN-CHIEF OF THE ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC TO THE PEOPLE OF NICARAGUA.

COUNTRYMEN: Recent unfortunate events, which have covered Central America in mourning, had destroyed the prosperity of our unfortunate country; and when saved from the momentary danger, we undertook to repair as much as possible the immense evils under which we had suffered—when a united people sought with patriotic endeavor to reconstruct our social and political edifice, and to unite ourselves more strongly with the other States of Central America, to assure our independence and sovereignty—an act highly offensive to the dignity of the Republic and which sought to diminish our territorial integrity, diverted our attention from these important and interesting subjects.

The Government of Costa Rica, regarding but little its own honor and dignity, and the incontestible rights of Nicaragua, and forgetful of the common danger which from abroad threatened both it and us, pretends to appropriate the dominion of the line of the transit, established by way of the river San Juan and lake of Nicaragua, and to that end has ordered a blockade of the fort of San Carlos, and a demand to the officer in charge of it to surrender or perish from hunger. An act so oppressive and unjust towards us, consequent upon the disorder and calamities in which our people have been involved, can only effect a sentiment of indignation in the heart of every good Nicaraguan; and the Government, profoundly offended, has not hesitated to accept the war she has so inexcusably provoked, well assured of the ardent enthusiasm which animates you for the honor and interest of our common country.

I have taken the command of the army in order to vindicate with arms our rights, attacked by a Government whose unhallowed ambition, is not arrested by the principles of justice, by the sanctity of truth, by the titles of friendly and common interest, by the idea in fine, the supreme idea of the misfortunes which overwhelm us, and towards which is pointed, as towards us, the terrible threat of filibusterism, and whose consummation is made easier by its misguided proceedings.

The Government of Costa Rica can scarcely harbor the idea that our people have become so debilitated by a war so prolonged and devastating, as to have sunk to that depth of degradation which will tolerate outrage upon our most sacred rights.

Nicaragua will prove to the world that the detraction from her wealth, that the revolutions from which she has suffered, that the disorder in which she has lived, that the many and great misfortunes of which she has been the victim, have not extinguished the sentiment of national honor, of independence and liberty; and that she will a thousand times rather disappear from the catalogue of nations, than to humiliate herself by receiving the law from—by admitting the tutelage of—any one who presumes upon her impotence to force her to surrender the most valuable portions of her territory.

We have ample means for war and for peace. Our Government does not deny and is not ungrateful for the important services of the people of Costa Rica in the struggle that has just ended. It does not deny the imperious necessity that calls upon the two countries to unite and identify their interests to preserve their political existence; it does not deny, in fine, that the people of Costa Rica may be forced by their unjust Government into a fratricidal war, without adopting the sentiments which conduce to this unpardonable wrong; and with this conviction I have been invested with full faculties, so that, in case it be possible to come to an understanding, I can bring about a union on a basis most advantageous to both countries; but this union must spring from the deference of Nicaragua, and from her benevolent sentiments towards Costa Rica. It can never be the result of the aggressions of the actual Government, which infringes upon the most sacred rights of nations, inflicting upon our country the great humiliation of seeing the most valuable portion of her territory usurped, and which takes so much pains to dishonor and vilify us in the ears of the world, to justify its pretensions, but now give rise to our just indignation.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: The moment has arrived to prove that we yet have life and being; and that we cannot be vilified and insulted with impunity; that we cannot with impunity be robbed, and subjected to the shameful condition of the abject and imbecile. Our cause is holy. Central America and the whole world will justify us; and even the people whom it is proposed to use against us will acknowledge our rights and perceive in the attempt of their Government against us another motive to subtract from its fatal power, and to fraternize with us, in order to secure their future safety.

The war, then, is against the Government of Costa Rica, and not against the people, who groan beneath its tyrannies. Let us comfort them to accept our desire for union, as also the deference with which we desire to recompense them, for their sacrifices in our behalf, and to prevent the shedding of blood and the ravages of war.

NICARAGUA!—The campaign is opened. Gather about the Government which comes [illegible] your opinion, your patriotism, your [illegible] your resources.

CHIEFS, OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS: Let us consecrate your blood the national [illegible] rights of your country. The [illegible] vation. I shall accompany you everywhere, and guarantee in your name, constancy, subordination and valor.

GRANADA, Oct. 20, 1857. TOMAS MARTINEZ.

THE SECOND IN COMMAND OF THE ARMY.

To the Inhabitants of the Department of Leon:

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN: The Republic is perfidiously invaded. The Government of Costa Rica has resolved to take possession of the Transit line from sea to sea, to place it at the disposition of the Morgan Company; and with incredible perfidy has directed its operations against our military posts. Neither our deferencias, nor the cordial sentiment which obtains of uniting our two countries in a single Republic, have sufficed to prevent the Government of Costa Rica from harboring the idea of usurpation, interpreting, no doubt, our generosity as imbecility and impotence.

The Government of Nicaragua does not seek war. It detests it, but it does not fear it. It accepts it because the war is provoked. It accepts it, because it is her duty to preserve intact the territory of the Republic, and not to see snatched from her with impunity, and with unheard-of abuse of confidence, rights that have never been disputed.

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN: Only an imperious necessity induces us to appeal to arms. The country exacts new sacrifices from us. You are the witnesses of the steps that have been taken to establish union and peace. MORA alone is the author of the war. Costa Ricans have no part in his perfidy and ambition. They are only the victims.

CHIEFS, OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE WEST: Gen. MARTINEZ, Commander in Chief of the Army of the Republic, and your comrades of the other departments, expect us with anxiety on the field of honor. They have confidence in your valor and patriotism, to hasten to the defence and vindication of the rights of the nation. MAXIMO JEREZ.

LEON, Oct. 25, 1857.

The Treaty Between the United States and New-Granada.

We find in the Lima Comercio an extract from the Convention signed at Washington on the 10th September by the Secretary of State and the Plenipotentiary of New-Granada.* It was probably furnished the Comercio by the Peruvian Minister at Washington. As the reports of this treaty heretofore published were not very full, we translate the document from the Comercio:

ARTICLE 1. New-Granada acknowledges her responsibility for the damages caused by the riot at Panama on the 15th of April, 1856, a responsibility as well out of an obligation as from an attribute of her sovereignty; and all the reclamations originating in this riot, as well as others which are pending between her and citizens of the United States, shall be submitted to a commission, which shall assemble in Washington, composed of two persons, one to be named by New-Granada and the other by the United States, settling all the cases of disacord by an arbitration, named by themselves, before commencing their labors, or by the Minister of Prussia in the United States, if the Commissioners cannot agree in the selection.

ART. 2. The Commission shall examine and decide upon the claims that shall be presented by the Government of the United States, fix the sums which shall be paid, in cases which they shall consider it just to indemnify the claimants; issue to each one the respective certificate, and the total shall be paid to the Government of the United States at Washington, in equal quantities semi-annually. Each sum shall gain an interest of six per centum (payable also half-yearly) from the day when the respective claims shall be admitted.

ART. 3. To meet these payments, New-Granada shall especially designate one-half of the whole sum which she shall receive from her per centage of the Panama Railroad, and if this shall not suffice, she shall pay the balance from other resources.

ART. 4. The decisions of the Commission shall be definitive in respect to all the claims that shall be presented, and its decisions shall be a complete discharge for New-Granada from all the claims of citizens of the United States against her, that have their origin previous to the signing of the Convention.

ART. 5. Each Government shall pay the cost of its commission, and the arbiter and the incidental charges shall be divided between the two nations.

ART. 6. The exchange of ratifications shall be within nine months from the signing of the Convention, or before if possible. The commission shall assemble within ninety days after the exchange of ratifications, its labors lasting nine months; six months after the day of their constitution shall be the date of the first payment, and the total shall be completed in eight years from the same date.

ART. 7. As the United States may desire to purchase or rent a portion of the land of one of the islands in the Bay of Panama, for the purpose of establishing a depôt there for coal, the Government of New-Granada, being solicitous to favor in this desire a friendly nation, concedes to the United States the privilege of purchasing or renting said portion of land, which shall not exceed one hundred English acres in extent, in which the United States may construct wharves, quays, and whatever constructions may be necessary for the enjoyment of this privilege with the above-mentioned object; and whilst the United States shall occupy this land, no contributions of whatever nature shall be exacted from her, not upon the wharves, quays, or other constructions erected by her, nor upon the property of the United States which shall be employed or deposited there. But it is understood and expressly stipulated that the anterior concession shall not impair or affect in any manner the territorial sovereignty of the Republic of New Granada upon the portion of land taken, which it is stipulated to sell or rent to the United States.

Panama Items.

Our Panama correspondent in a letter dated the 19th of November, sends the following:

Col. G. M. TORRIN, the builder of the Panama Railroad, goes to New-York on this steamer. His unflagging attention to his onerous duties for seven years on this Isthmus, has somewhat injured his general health, and he is now suffering much from a dimness of sight, occasioned, I believe, by a nervous attack some weeks since. But a few months of the fresh air of the North will restore his accustomed elasticity, when he will return to his post.

The Aspinwall Courier died last week from lack of exist. This paper had been established for about four years, and was of great benefit to such of the New-York and New-Orleans press as could not afford to maintain a correspondent on the Isthmus.

I passed over the Railroad with the United States troops and a portion of the New-York passengers on Sunday, the 15th. Notwithstanding that we are in the height of the rainy season, the running time, 47 miles, occupied only two hours. Most of the magnificent bridges are now up, and the road the whole length has been so solidified the past year, as to make it equal to many of the best roads in the Atlantic States. The Company have kept about 800 men constantly employed on the road since it was opened in 1855, the expense of which has served to keep down the dividends to 12 per cent a year. But now that the bridges are up, a fine stone depôt built at Aspinwall, and convenient depôts all along the route, the stockholders will no doubt commence to receive greater profit from the enterprise.

Considerable feeling exists here among a certain class of speculators in money, on account of a notice from the Chief Engineer of the Railroad, that the Company would no longer receive English, French, Central and South American gold at four or five per cent above its real value. They thought a notice of three or six months should have been given, in order that they might get rid of the amount already on hand, and addressed Colonel TORRIN remonstrating against his decision. But the Colonel remains firm. As of course, if the time asked had been given, the big capitalist would have passed all the depreciated gold off on to the railroad and the little capitalists. Colonel TORRIN is to be applauded for his decision. Those who complain most at now losing a few hundred dollars by this decision, have made many hundreds by the coin shave.

Affairs in Chili.

POLITICAL INTELLIGENCE—THE NEW CABINET—PROJECTS FOR REFORM AND IMPROVEMENT—ARRIVAL AND RECEPTION OF GOV. BIGLER—THE "SPORTSMAN" CASE—MISCELLANEOUS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

VALPARAISO, Friday, Nov. 13, 1857.

The last fortnight has been eminently barren of such news as can interest your general readers. There are many Chilians, however, who are constant readers of the TIMES, who will find in the letter I am about writing you much that will please them. Among you are many of Chili's best citizens in the enjoyment of an honorable exile, and in their letters home your columns often give them eloquent subjects of interest for their readers here.

Chili has redeemed herself, and I recall all the predictions I have made to you in my former letter. When I last wrote you everything looked gloomy, and specks on the horizon were fast becoming clouds. The President was unable to find fair men who would take Cabinet office under him, but a change has come over the spirit of the political drama of this little star of the South. The Cabinet is formed, and is composed of the brain and nerve and intellect of the Republic. URRUTIA takes the Portfolio of Foreign Affairs; SOLAS of Hacienda; SAN FRUENTES of Public Instruction, and GARCIA of War and Marine. Their very names are household words among the several conflicting parties, and all dissensions have been healed with the announcement of their acceptance of office.

It will be something of assurance of how liberal will be the conduct of the new administration when I tell you that Mr. Pinto, who [illegible] during long years in the United States. Among the districts of the new Administration have been the convening [illegible] the embodying to [illegible] The budget of supplies which had been [illegible] a passage by the late Congress, and which have been voted upon, can by this. A project for an entire reform of the manner of conducting elections, substituting instead of the old system of making candidates of those only whom the Government designated, the choice of the people, constituting a Congress which will give every opportunity to Chili of showing to the world how ably she can administer her Constitution when untrammeled and unbiased by [illegible] political favor. A project for the establishment of a broader system of public instruction, which has become a pet idea among the better classes of Santiago and Valparaiso. A loan of seven millions of dollars to aid the Government to carry on the Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad, and to perfect certain internal improvements already projected or under way. In short, a number of grand strides forward have been taken by Chili in the last fortnight.

The opposition journals are hushed, and rather lend their voices to congratulate the country that the political El Dorado has been reached, and that the Hydra-headed monster of revolution, which threatened to devastate their country, has been crushed.

In the interim all who have until now been exiled from their families and homes have been recalled, and the year 1857 will be long remembered at many a fireside in Chili.

Among the events of the last two weeks has been the presentation of Gov. BIGLER, late of California, as Minister Plenipotentiary near this Government. I send you a copy of his speech as translated from the papers of this city, as well as the reply of the President. [These were published in the TIMES of yesterday in the letter of another correspondent.—ED.]

The Governor has only entered upon his official duties. He will have abundance of work to employ him for months to come, and among other interesting items he will find the sportsman case in which many of our citizens and one of the first houses in the City are interested. What has been done in the matter has not transpired yet, but that the prosecution of a claim against the Government, in consequence of it, is actively going on, I have no doubt.

We have had, throughout the country most copious rains, and will have probably the most abundant wheat crop known for years.

Among the American vessels now in port we have the Red Rover, Reliance, Pera, Mariana and Emeline.

Trade is particularly dull and exchange very high. The loan, however, about being made, will lower the rate of the latter.

THE CENTRAL AMERICA.

Partial Report of the Committee of Inquiry.

From the testimony, oral and written, voluntarily communicated to the Committee by several of the surviving officers and passengers of the late United States mail steamship Central America, belonging to a Company having a contract from Government for an annual pay of $858,000, it would appear that that vessel had not, at the time of her departure from Havana for New-York, about 10 A. M. on Tuesday, the 8th day of September last, a sufficient number of hands for her machinery; but it is generally questionable whether the pumps and other appliances of the donkey-engine prove in good working order, and it is quite certain that the ordinary deck pumps were not so. The vessel, about 50 hours after leaving Havana, she encountered a severe adverse gale, which increased in violence, producing a heavy head sea; that so heavy as there was a sufficient quantity of steam to keep the vessel under steady headway, she maintained her course and weathered the storm; that on the morning of the 11th, at about 7½, the gale abated heavily—in fact, to such an extent as to alarm the passengers and arouse the captain and chief engineer, who were at that time in their berths or state-rooms; that about noon, the gale still increasing, the fall of rain from the wind, and it then appeared that the fires in the engine-room had, by some unexplained circumstance, been allowed to go down, and had become so low that the engines had gradually slowed, and finally stopped working; and the headway on the ship thus consequently checked, she fell off into what the seamen call a "trough of the sea," and partly on her side. An attempt was then made, and the chief partially succeeded, to get steam on the engines, but before [illegible] than half a dozen revolutions, the main shaft broke in the centre before they stopped entirely and forever. It may be inferred from the evidence that the original fault, and that which led to the catastrophe, was in the neglect, above stated, to keep up a sufficient and continued head of steam, and, when it was found to have fallen so dangerously low, in there not being greater and more timely efforts exerted to replenish it by supplying the furnaces with fuel, of which there was abundance at hand. Up to the breaking of the engines, we do not find that any serious consequence had reached the engine room, nor was there any reason to apprehend such a result as long as the fires were properly kept up and the duties of the officers and men in the engineer's department faithfully performed. It does not appear, from the testimony, that there was any serious leak in the bottom of the vessel, or fracture or break of any part of the machinery; but that the engines, as already remarked, were prevented from working, only by want of steam, and that the water leisurely and slowly entered the vessel (as she was lying upon her side or very much keeled) by some of the air-ports which were either inadvertently left open or imperfectly closed, as also by the opening at the paddle-wheel shaft, and through the probable open seams about the guards and other parts of the upper works, the accidentally immersed. The water gradually has accumulating, was washed by the motion of the vessel against and into the ash-pans and furnaces, extinguishing entirely the fires and rendering it impossible finally to raise steam in the main boilers. All hopes being exhausted of further using the main engine, and the pumps connected with them becoming of no avail, resort was had to the donkey-engine, and attempting steam in the boiler by burning the cabin doors for fuel, these also proved to be defective, and notwithstanding the efforts made by the officers and others to remove the difficulty, they could not get the pumps to work to any advantage, and consequently the further use of them was abandoned and [illegible]

The regular deck pumps also proved to be out of order, rendering them of little or no avail, and in the attempt to construct temporary hand pumps by means of the passengers, none of the ship's carpenter's tools could be found.

Whilst the ship was lying in this helpless condition, attempts were made

J. DANACH, Superintendent.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF THE SEVENTH WARD.—A large meeting of the citizens of the Seventh Ward met at Botanic Hall, composed of men of all parties, and representing the various business interests of the Ward, as well as the laboring men, with a view to effects a change in the mode of appointing School Officers of the Ward. The following was nominated as a no-party ticket:

For Commissioner of Common Schools—DANIEL COZINE, Ship-joiner, No. 229 Madison-street.

For Inspector of Schools—Dr. J. E. SACHERASS, No. 179 East Broadway.

For Trustees—Dr. JOHN WITHERELL, No. 66 Monroe-street; BERNARD FEELON, Shipwright, No. 55 Henry-street; MARLEN T. HAWIZ, Merchant, No. 142 Madison-street.

☞ MARK COHEN.—It was a mistake saying that MARK COHEN, the private watchman whom the Coroner's Jury in the William-street murder investigation "found accessory after the fact," was ordered to be locked up in the Tombs. Instead, Mr. COHEN, almost instantly after the rendition of the verdict, gave bail in $5,000, Mr. JACOBS, of Chatham-street, being his bondsman. COHEN says that the only man he ever attended in the matter was HILTON.

THE CENTRAL PARK.—Over one thousand men are now at work here. The Executive Committee had a meeting yesterday forenoon, to arrange for additional work, which will require five hundred men more. The Board, however, must first pass upon it, before the work can proceed. It relates to the laying of a retaining wall along the Fifth-avenue side of the Park. The $30,000 advanced by Mr. Comptroller FLAGG, is being fast expended, and there has been no bid whatever for the $250,000 loan voted by the City Government. As the Commissioners are determined not to incur a dollar's expense without the means to pay, the chances are that in less than ten days the whole present force will be discharged.

☞ WORKING-GIRLS GOING WEST.—A large party of the working-girls who have been thrown out of employment during the late financial crisis, and who were in much poverty and suffering in consequence, left the City yesterday in the Kinderhook, Hudson-river line, very comfortably accommodated, and at reduced fares. The girls numbered about forty. They left the Branch office of the Children's Aid Society, in Mercer-street, accompanied by Mr. H. PRESSWOOD.

☞ Property in the vicinity of that portion of Reade-street which is to be widened, the northerly side between Washington and Centre streets, has been assessed to the amount of about $500,000 by the Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the Supreme Court, Messrs. E. B. HAIN, J. W. BOWEN and T. B. BERGEN. The width of the street is to be increased by twenty-two feet. The action of the Commissioners is yet to be confirmed. The property-holders who have been most largely assessed will, it is said, oppose the confirmation.

DROWNED.—Captain JAMES BELBRUCK, of the barge P. R. Cornelius, of Albany, accidentally fell overboard on Saturday evening from the steamboat Niagara, when about one mile this side of Piermont. The Niagara had a number of barges in tow, and Capt. B. having occasion to go on board the Niagara was about returning when he slipped on some ice which had formed near the guards, and was precipitated into the river. His body was not recovered.

☞ A sad accident occurred on Thanksgiving day on Staten Island, near the residence of Hon. T. CARRIE, Jr., from carelessness in firing at a target with only a board fence to arrest the balls. A son of Mr. CALHOUN, playing in an adjoining field, was shot in the neck. The ball entered between the wind-pipe and the carotid artery, sinking deep among the blood-vessels. It was taken out by Dr. HAINE, of Port Richmond. The boy was living when we last heard.

ARRIVAL OF PROVINCIAL PRODUCE.—The British brig Rover's Bride, from Prince Edward's Island, arrived yesterday morning, has on board on freight 14,824 bushels and 481 barrels potatoes, 481 bushels turnips, 1,629 bushels barley, 2,557 bushels oats, 48 bags oatmeal and 8 barrels carrots.

SUDDEN FATAL FALL.—Miss MARIA C. WEBBER, who was boarding temporarily at No. 460 Greenwich-street with Mr. WILLIAM D. BENSON, was found on Saturday by Mr. BENSON on his return home, lying dead at the bottom of the stairs. It is supposed that she must have slipped in going down stairs. The Coroner has been notified, and will hold an inquest.

RUN OVER BY A CAR.—GEORGE LOCKWELL was runover on Sunday, by one of the Sixth-avenue Railroad cars, near Seventeenth-street. His right thigh was fractured and he was otherwise injured. He was taken to the City Hospital.

FATAL FALL.—On Saturday afternoon WILLIAM BENSON fell from the roof of DARRIS' machine shop, foot of Fifty-second-street, North River, and died fifteen minutes afterwards. The Coroner has been notified.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Carreting in Bread Daylight.

Michael O'Brien, residing at No. 6 City Hall-place, yesterday went into an intelligence office in the Bowery, near Delancy-street, to engage a girl for "hire." He had hardly got inside when two men seized him by the throat, robbed him of his money and fled. The rascals were so bold and quick in their movements that they finished their job and were off in less than half a minute. Quite a number of persons were present in the room, but the unprecedented boldness of the proceeding so utterly astonished them, that before one of them thought of an arrest, the rascals had got out of the room. O'Brien recovered himself, however, in a moment, and darted after the fellows, crying "stop thief" at the top of his voice. Officer Williams, of Tenth Ward, immediately joined him in pursuit of the fugitives, and arrested one of them, the other escaped. The arrested party gave his name as Edward Fiyle. Being taken before Justice BOSWORTH, at the Essex-Market Police Court, he said he had worked at stone-cutting, but had been out of employment for several weeks and had got tired of waiting to get work. The Justice ordered him to be locked up in default of $1,000 bail; and he intimated that he had taken a course that was quite sure to furnish him with a good stone-cutting job up the river, in the vicinity of Sing Sing.

THE BOGUS TICKET-SWINDLE.—Two bogus ticket-sellers were complained of yesterday at the Police head-quarters. Wm. Ward, who keeps an office at No. 108 West-street, and Henry Forbes, proprietor of the ticket-office corner of Chambers and West Streets. Patrick Tondley, the complainant, states that he arrived in the City yesterday morning, from New-Jersey, with his family, intending to go West. He purchased six tickets of WARD, which he supposed entitled him to passage in first-class cars to the Mississippi, but on inquiry, he discovered that he had been imposed upon him counterfeit tickets. He called on WARD to have the matter rectified, but the latter not only refused to give him any satisfaction, but even threatened to pitch into him if he did not leave the office forthwith. The complainant in the second case was Mr. WM. TAYLOR, from Upper Canada. Mr. TAYLOR says he applied at the ticket-office corner of Chambers and West-streets for a first-class cabin ticket to Liverpool, in a packet ship. He was sold a steerage ticket by Forbes for $70, which was an excess of $40 over the right charge. He failed likewise to get back his money, or any satisfaction beyond a threat of being pounded if he dared to make any fuss in the matter. Officers KING and MACDONALD, of the Deputy Superintendent's office, were dispatched to arrest the accused parties.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF GOODS SEIZED FROM A WOMAN.—Madame LAMBERT, whose name has several times appeared in the records of the Police Courts, is again in difficulty. Some two weeks ago information was imparted to the Superintendent of Police that she had an ill-famed establishment in Spring-street, and that her boarders had it imposed upon them as a specialty to "shop" daily at the leading dry goods and fancy stores in the City, and "lift" anything of value they could prudently lay hands on. On Thursday last Madame L. moved to No. 147 Grand-street, taking her troupe with her. The police "piped" the place and found that a two-fold business was carried on there. On Friday night a descent was made on the place. As the officers began to subject Madame L. to an examination, she broke away from them and thrust a handful of paper into the fire. An officer quickly snatched the bundle from the flames and discovered that it consisted of three $10 counterfeit bills and a letter from J. SILVERSTONE, her "man." On making an examination of the house, a large amount of valuable property was found, including pearl and diamond necklaces, bracelets, earrings, finger rings, gold watches, gold and silver plate, pieces of silk and satin, costly India shawls, linen sheets, silk dresses, &c. The property was removed to the Police Head-quarters and placed in care of the Property Clerk. There was such a variety of goods that it took several officers nearly all day Saturday to make an inventory of them. The value of the property is estimated at $15,000. Madame L. declares that she brought the goods with her from Paris. Justice OSBORN, before whom she was taken, committed her to bail.

A VESSEL ROBBED OF $10,000 IN GOLD.—On Saturday night two kegs of gold doubloons, amounting to $10,000, were stolen from the bark Pentucket, lying foot of Pier No. 13, East River. The money was in the cabin, and Capt. McBEAN, who had occasion in the early part of the evening to leave the vessel, left the vessel and money in charge of Joshua Renwick, the first mate, and William Ragan, the steward. On his return to the bark he found the two men named missing, and the money with them. He at once notified the Police of his loss and a thorough search was instituted for the missing men, but thus far without any success. The two men were seen to row away from the vessel, and as a small boat belonging to the bark was found also to be missing, there is no doubt they took this method of getting off. Capt. McBEAN has offered a reward of $2,000 for the recovery of the money. Renwick is a large, brawny fellow, with broad shoulders, high cheek bones, light complexion, and standing six feet in his stockings. Ragan is a small mulatto, with freckled face and short reddish curly hair.

CHARGE OF GRAND LARCENY.—John Wild, hardware merchant at No. 86 Cedar-street, has for some time past missed packages of knives from his store. On taking an inventory of stock it was ascertained that 126 packages of knives were missing, altogether valued at $612 47. A day or two since suspicion fell on Charles L. Tucker, who had an office in the store. Officer Webb followed Mr. Tucker to his boarding place, Crook's Hotel, No. 195 Washington-street, and searched his room, where were found 120 packages of the missing knives. The accused was taken on Saturday before Justice OSBORN at the Tombs, and admitted to $500 bail to answer a charge of grand larceny.

COOL BURGLARS.—Some bold burglars on Sunday night entered the dwelling house of Matthew Abearne, No. 262 West Forty-fourth-street, and carried off jewelry and clothing worth nearly $200. As the occupants room up stairs the burglars had a free and jolly time in the rooms below. After collecting together all the valuables they desired to take with them, they knocked off the top of a bottle of champagne and helped themselves to the contents. A reward is offered for the recovery of the articles.

CAPTURE OF A SUPPOSED BURGLAR.—Early yesterday morning Ernesis Miller, alias Douglass, a waiter, was overhauled in Mercer-street, having about $25 worth of clothing in his possession. As he gave an unsatisfactory account of his right of possession, he was taken into custody, when it was afterwards ascertained that the clothing had been stolen from the clothing store of Mr. Samuel Livingston, No. 307 Prince-street, which was broken into a few nights since. The accused was committed by Justice DAVISON.

CRAWLED IN SO SNOOZE.—Dennis Fitzgerald, a boatman, was found on Sunday night concealed on board the sloop Robert Freeman. As he was believed [illegible] accompanied Mr. FREEMAN.

☞ Property in the vicinity of that portion of Reade-street which is to be widened, the northerly side between Washington and Centre streets, has been assessed to the amount of about $500,000 by the Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the Supreme Court, Messrs. E. B. HAIN, J. W. BOWEN and T. B. BERGEN. The width of the street is to be increased by twenty-two feet. The action of the Commissioners is yet to be confirmed. The property-holders who have been most largely assessed will, it is said, oppose the confirmation.

DROWNED.—Captain JAMES BELBRUCK, of the barge P. R. Cornelius, of Albany, accidentally fell overboard on Saturday evening from the steamboat Niagara, when about one mile this side of Piermont. The Niagara had a number of barges in tow, and Capt. B. having occasion to go on board the Niagara was about returning when he slipped on some ice which had formed near the guards, and was precipitated into the river. His body was not recovered.

☞ A sad accident occurred on Thanksgiving day on Staten Island, near the residence of Hon. T. CARRIE, Jr., from carelessness in firing at a target with only a board fence to arrest the balls. A son of Mr. CALHOUN, playing in an adjoining field, was shot in the neck. The ball entered between the wind-pipe and the carotid artery, sinking deep among the blood-vessels. It was taken out by Dr. HAINE, of Port Richmond. The boy was living when we last heard.

ARRIVAL OF PROVINCIAL PRODUCE.—The British brig Rover's Bride, from Prince Edward's Island, arrived yesterday morning, has on board on freight 14,824 bushels and 481 barrels potatoes, 481 bushels turnips, 1,629 bushels barley, 2,557 bushels oats, 48 bags oatmeal and 8 barrels carrots.

SUDDEN FATAL FALL.—Miss MARIA C. WEBBER, who was boarding temporarily at No. 460 Greenwich-street with Mr. WILLIAM D. BENSON, was found on Saturday by Mr. BENSON on his return home, lying dead at the bottom of the stairs. It is supposed that she must have slipped in going down stairs. The Coroner has been notified, and will hold an inquest.

RUN OVER BY A CAR.—GEORGE LOCKWELL was runover on Sunday, by one of the Sixth-avenue Railroad cars, near Seventeenth-street. His right thigh was fractured and he was otherwise injured. He was taken to the City Hospital.

FATAL FALL.—On Saturday afternoon WILLIAM BENSON fell from the roof of DARRIS' machine shop, foot of Fifty-second-street, North River, and died fifteen minutes afterwards. The Coroner has been notified.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Carreting in Bread Daylight.

Michael O'Brien, residing at No. 6 City Hall-place, yesterday went into an intelligence office in the Bowery, near Delancy-street, to engage a girl for "hire." He had hardly got inside when two men seized him by the throat, robbed him of his money and fled. The rascals were so bold and quick in their movements that they finished their job and were off in less than half a minute. Quite a number of persons were present in the room, but the unprecedented boldness of the proceeding so utterly astonished them, that before one of them thought of an arrest, the rascals had got out of the room. O'Brien recovered himself, however, in a moment, and darted after the fellows, crying "stop thief" at the top of his voice. Officer Williams, of Tenth Ward, immediately joined him in pursuit of the fugitives, and arrested one of them, the other escaped. The arrested party gave his name as Edward Fiyle. Being taken before Justice BOSWORTH, at the Essex-Market Police Court, he said he had worked at stone-cutting, but had been out of employment for several weeks and had got tired of waiting to get work. The Justice ordered him to be locked up in default of $1,000 bail; and he intimated that he had taken a course that was quite sure to furnish him with a good stone-cutting job up the river, in the vicinity of Sing Sing.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.—Nov. 28.

Before Judge Nelson.

A Grand Jury was summoned for this morning, but as Judge NELSON was occupied with the argument of a patent case, they were discharged until Thursday next, without being organized.

Will Cangemi be Sentenced?

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges MITCHELL, CLERKE and DAVIES.

The Court was crowded yesterday by parties anxious to hear sentence of death pronounced on the Italian, Michell Cangemi, convicted of the murder of Policeman Eugene Anderson, in July last. Cangemi was indicted, and the indictment was filed in the Court of General Sessions, Aug. 6. Upon his being arraigned, he pleaded Not Guilty. His trial was removed, on certiorari, to the Court of Oyer and Terminor, where he was tried in October. The Jury disagreed, and he was remanded to prison. His second trial was appointed to take place in the Supreme Court Circuit, when he was tried last month before Judge DAVIES. As he could only be sentenced in the General Term, by a full bench, he was brought up to receive sentence, it being the last day of term.

At the opening of Court Mr. Hall, the District-Attorney on the part of the people, moved that judgment should be pronounced upon him. Whereupon Mr. BLANKMAN, one of the counsel assigned by the Court of Sessions to defend him, moved for an arrest of judgment, in a speech of over two hours duration. The counsel based his argument on the following points, which he submitted to the consideration of the Court:

MR. BLANKMAN'S POINTS.

First—That the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction in the above case, and that all the proceedings which took place at the Circuit Court, before his Honor Justice DAVIES, were coram non judice.

Second—That the verdict of the jury as entered on the record does not find the defendant guilty of the offence, in manner and form, as he stood indicted.

Third—That the certiorari directed to the Court of Oyer and Terminer for the County of New-York, to send up the indictment pending therein in the case of the People against Michael Cangemi, has not been properly returned; that the indictment sent up and tried comes from the Oyer and Terminer for the City of New-York, there being no such court known to the laws and Constitution of this State.

Fourth—If the Court had jurisdiction to try the indictment removed from Oyer and Terminer to the Supreme Court, the order directing in what circuit it should be tried should have been made at a Special and not at the General Term of the Supreme Court—the powers of the General Term of the Supreme Court being simply of an appellate character.

Fifth—That the indictment in this cause was found and filed in the Court of General Sessions of the peace for the City and County of New-York, in pursuance of the act of 1855, and never was an indictment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of New-York.

Sixth—That by an order of the Supreme Court, made the 11th day of August, 1857, the said indictment was ordered to be tried in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of New-York, which order never has been reversed or vacated by the Court, and that the said order so directing the trial of said indictment to be had in said Court of Oyer and Terminer, was in full force and effect at the time when said trial was had in the Circuit Court before Hon. Justice DAVIES.

Seventh—That, prior to the act of 1855, the Court of General Sessions had no jurisdiction in capital cases, and therefore the act of 1847 being passed prior to the act of 1845, never could be construed to give the Circuit Court jurisdiction in a cause pending or originating in the Court of General Sessions; otherwise the section of the act of 1855, which gives the party defendant a stay of judgment as a matter of right, would have mentioned the Circuit Court as well as Oyer and Terminer and General Sessions.

The statute of jeofails, or amendments, do not extend to criminal proceedings, and, therefore, essential defects are not, as in civil cases, aided by verdict. (1 Chit. Cr. L. 651. Barb. Cr. Law, 372.)

Nor is the ground of arresting the judgment confined to the indictment alone. It may be found in any part of the record. (1 Chit. Cr. L., 661. Barb Cr. p. 372.)

Where a criminal cause is tried at the Circuit, judgment is rendered by the Supreme Court, and if there be a conviction, it seems that the circumstances in evidence must be laid before them by a case, or in some other way, to enable them to estimate the proper measure of punishment. (7 Cowen, 108-123, 142. Barb. 356.)

Where an indictment has been found at the General Sessions for an offence triable in that Court, and the cause is subsequently removed into the Oyer and Terminer by a Judge's order, the Oyer and Terminer has power to direct the indictment to be sent back to the Sessions for trial, &c., &c. (Barb. C. L. 297.)

The power of the Supreme Court to send the cause out of the county for trial. (1 Laws 1847, p. 233, s. 42. Barb. C. L., p. 306.)

The statute provides for the removal of the indictment from the General Sessions. No record is to be transmitted.

If, then, the prisoner was not arraigned at the Circuit, there is no evidence that he had ever been arraigned.

[illegible] the trial to be had at the Circuit, and the proceedings on the part of the trial [illegible] in the Supreme Court Circuit, and that new trial, in which Cangemi was convicted, was illegal, and therefore that the verdict of the jury was of no effect.

Judge MITCHELL, for the Court, responded that the points offered by Counsel, in arrest of judgment, demanded the attention of the Court, which would take time to consider them. He ordered Cangemi to be remanded to prison, and brought again before the Court on Monday next.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

DECISIONS.

THE GLASS BALLOT-BOXES.

Yesterday, on the opening of the Court, Judge ROOSEVELT remarked that in reference to the order for the examination of Mayor Wood, in the Glass Ballot-Box matter, the case was before Judge DAVIES, and he must pass upon the motion. By consent of counsel, the whole affair was adjourned until Dec. 10.

Isaac M. Bull vs. Gideon Nye, Jr., et al.—Motion to set aside proceedings, granted in part.

In re John B. Holmes, a debtor confined for crime.—Reference ordered, and appointment of trustees reserved until the coming in of the report. This was an application to have a trustee appointed to take charge of the estate of Holmes the forger to pay his debts and provide for his family.

Warriner vs. Richardson.—Judgment charging the defendant on the separate estate of the wife, &c.

Eli Fay vs. L. Clarkson Dye.—Motion to open judgment denied.

Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company vs. H. H. Goodman et al.—Motion to dissolve the injunction denied.

John A. Davis vs. D. C. Newell.—The attachment in the three suits should be discharged, unless the plaintiff is willing to take an order of reference, which, in that case, will be entered at his expense, to investigate the disputed questions of fact, and especially the alleged intent of the defendant as against the plaintiff and others of his creditors in the disposition or contemplated disposition of his property.

The President, Directors, &c., of the Connecticut Bank vs. The North American Gutta Percha Company.—The note was signed by Peck individually and indorsed by him as President of the Company. This shows that the addition was not mere description of the person, but description of the different character in which the indorsement was made. It shows conclusively that both Peck as an individual and the Company, and through him, as its representative, were intended to be bound. Nor is there any pretence that the Company did not receive the avails. Under such circumstances there would be no equity in setting aside a judgment confessedly regular and which the evidence shows to be substantially right.

The libel suit of John Farrel against the TIMES was yesterday discontinued on motion of the defendants, with $10 costs against the plaintiff.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Duer.

MORE BILLS AGAINST THE CITY.

H. W. Phair et al. vs. The Mayor &c. of New-York.—The plaintiffs' bring an action for $2,019 for public printing, done between the 1st of September, 1856, and the 1st of May, 1857. This printing was done under the direction of the Street Commissioner, and consisted of the notices for the opening of new streets, &c., &c.

The defense made is that the City is not liable, as the Street Commissioner had no authority to order the work done. The ordinance of 1853 required that all work to be done, and of supplies to be furnished by the Corporation involving an expenditure of more than $250 should be by contract founded on sealed bids, after proper advertisements, &c. In this case it is alleged that no advertisement was made. Decision reserved.

D. B. Taylor, for plaintiffs. A. R. Lawrence, Jr., Assistant Corporation Attorney, counsel for the defendants.

DECISIONS.

EXAMINATION OF A PARTY, DE BENE ESSE.

Mr. W. Ernest Zachrisson vs. Theodore W. Kilby.—This was an application for an order to examine the plaintiff as a witness in his own behalf, de bene esse, upon two days' notice, on the ground that he was about to leave the State. The cause is at issue, and was noticed for trial at the November term of the Court, and ten days' previous notice was served that the plaintiff would be examined in his own behalf as a witness. The cause was called for twice, and the plaintiff was examined on such trial under said notice. The Court denied this present application, on the ground that the Code, as amended, requires ten days' notice of the time and place of examination, specifying the points upon which it is to be had, to be served; and that the Court had no power to abridge this time; and that the notice previously served of the examination of the party at the trial was not sufficient to authorize his examination de bene esse at any other time and place.

Jas. B. Secord, Assistant Postmaster at Newburg, Canada, found guilty of stealing $20 from a registered letter, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The proprietors of the Newburyport Herald intend celebrating the 50th anniversary of their weekly paper, and the 50th of their daily, on the 17th of January, and purpose calling together every printer who served an apprenticeship in their office, and every editor or prominent contributor.

Resolutions severely denunciatory of Governor Walker's course in Kansas have been introduced into the Legislature of Alabama.

WOOL—Messrs. TELLEMAN & KNOWLES report that, during the week ending this evening, there have been quite a number of transactions in Wool, which, however, have not amounted to any great quantity, owing to the wide difference between the views of buyers and sellers. The prices are not yet firmly established; our quotations for domestic are, however, nearer to the point than those of the foreign Wool; this is owing to the fact that as little has been done in foreign Wool, chiefly because of the great difference existing between the opinions of the sellers and buyers about the present value. Our markets for low Wools will be, in future, regulated by European, and, principally, the English, the ruling prices of which are expected to range in general below ours.

A crowded and enthusiastic meeting of the young men opposed to FERNANDO WOOD's re-election to the position of Mayor, was held last night, at the Stuyvesant Institute. Speeches were made by WM. H. FRY, Esq., Prof. CROMBY, Hon. E. BROOKS, CHAUNCEY SCHAFFER, Esq., PETER Y. CUTTING, Esq., Hon. DANIEL E. SICKLES, Mr. WOODWORTH, JAMES FAIRMAN, Hon. AUGUSTINE A. DUGANNE and others.

The Election To-day.

The opposition to Mayor WOOD rests mainly upon a profound conviction in the public mind that he is not a man of integrity. Public rumor, public speech, the public prints and the records of our Courts of Justice teem with declarations, sustained by evidence, of his lack of that high-toned honesty which we trust our citizens will always consider indispensable in the Chief Magistrate of this great City.

To these damaging accusations the Mayor and his friends reply,—not by contradicting or refuting the evidence, nor by explaining the circumstances which are arrayed against him, but by challenging specific proof of specific acts of corruption and dishonesty since he has been in office. They complain, with the air of injured innocents, that the public scrutiny assumes to go behind the date of his accession, and beyond the limits of his office, to obtain material for a judgment of his character. This complaint is virtually a confession of the offences charged, and will be so regarded by the public at large. But, as our readers know, we have never thought it necessary to go beyond Mayor WOOD's official action for evidence of his utter unfitness for the high and responsible post which he has filled for the last three years. From first to last that action has been vacillating, unprincipled, utterly reckless of the public interest and guided exclusively by personal and political ambition. Mayor WOOD has alternately flattered and deceived every class and every portion of our people. He began by paying homage to wealth and respectability, — by lauding commerce, by soliciting the applause of men in high position, and by parading the certificates of bankers, merchants and other men of wealth to his personal and official merits. He has ended by denouncing this same class as men who "produce nothing, but get everything,"—and by exposing them to the plunder of the lowest dregs of the community, upon whom he now finds himself compelled to rely for support. He began by urging the necessity of a strong Police,—by demanding an amendment of the law which should separate the Police Board from the Judiciary, and by insisting upon a large increase of its force. Within the last year he has been found at the head of a mob, resisting the Police,—and he is now exerting all his powers, personally at the Board, and through the intervention of the Courts of law, to hamper and weaken the Department to the utmost of his ability. His course has been one of duplicity throughout. He issued double instructions to the Police concerning the License Law,—one set designed for the public and the other for the parties interested. He made a great parade, for the public, of suppressing gambling-houses, but left them all untouched. He has run through the whole gamut of demagoguism and political chicanery; and is now fairly reduced to the last shifts of a desperate political gambler, who stakes everything upon a final throw, and leaves no trick untried to secure success. He is now notoriously and ostentatiously relying for reelection upon the worst classes of our population. In personal appeals, in street harangues, in official coercion, in the use of money, in resort to every device of deception and fraud, upon the public and at the polls, he is active, untiring and determined.

It is this which characterizes his Administration and makes it conspicuously the basest and the most disgraceful this City has ever known. We need not look into his antecedent commercial transactions for evidences of his character. The whole tone and tenor of his official career has been demoralizing and degrading. He has squandered the money and the reputation of the City until it is well nigh bankrupt in both. Everybody who reads the current history of our City Government knows that it is so:—and it is preposterous and absurd, in the face of so profound and so universal a conviction, to demand proof of specific acts of dishonesty and dishonor. Such proof from the very nature of the case cannot be had, and is not needed. The only witnesses are accomplices. There is not a prostitute in the City who could not, with equal safety and upon the same grounds, demand specific proofs of specific acts, in reply to damaging accusations.

Now, the People of this City are to decide to-day, after full and fair trial, whether such a man is the proper person to fill the chief municipal office in the second commercial City in the world. We, here in New-York, live by credit, by the faith reposed by mankind in our honor and integrity. It is this confidence which has lined our streets with marble palaces, and brought the commerce of the world to our wharves. It is this confidence which has covered the Island of Manhattan with the industrious and thriving multitude whose extraordinary prosperity enables them to support with impunity the robberies and corruption of the Muncipal Government. If the commercial men of all lands did not implicitly believe that honesty was still prized amongst us, promises kept, and knavery punished, and rogues excluded not only from decent society, but from all share in the management of the financial affairs of all public bodies, they would have no dealings with us, and great and wealthy as we are, we should speedily be reduced to the condition of Venice or Mexico. Respect for fair dealing and integrity is therefore not simply a moral duty, but one of the conditions on which our prosperity is based. During the last three years, since Mayor WOOD has been in office, our reputation in all these respects has rapidly and steadily declined. Our Common Council has become a synonym for ignorance, vulgarity, corruption and rihaldry. Our streets are infested by brigands and cutthroats, who find impunity and glory in being the political friends and supporters of our chief magistrate. Our criminal judges bow down before the idol we have set up. We suppose for the first time in the history of municipalities, the judicial bench is found in collusion with criminals. Men of high standing in the political world, finding that the merchants, bankers and artisans rate honesty and personal character at so low a figure in public life, get up and inflict on us the horrible humiliation of declaring in the face of the world, that there exists in the City a party, who, if their leaders proposed the "devil incarnate" for the highest office in the gift of the people, would adopt him with acclamation, and that in a Democratic State this party calls itself, par excellence, the Democracy. And we are told, moreover, that this intense and relentless tyranny of party extends not merely into party contests, but into local elections,—into every struggle connected with government of any sort, no matter how remote it may be in character and objects from every legitimate political issue.

We do not believe the day has yet come in which the inhabitants of a city like this will sit down quietly under an imputation so atrocious—or obey a dictation so absolute and so irrational. We have to-day not simply to clear our Council Chamber of knaves and convicts, but to vindicate our own good name. We have to show that Democracy is not simply strong and irresistible, but decent and orderly; that if despotism surpass it in the regularity of its procedure, it does not surpass it in hostility to crime and corruption; and that although corrupt and selfish men may obtain power without merit, they cannot abuse and misuse it without swift and certain punishment.

The Kansas Question.

We learn from sources that admit of no doubt, that a very serious difference of opinion exists between Governor WALKER and the Administration, in regard to the action of the Lecompton Convention. The President desires that Governor WALKER should return to Kansas and urge the people to vote upon the question of Slavery, which is to be submitted to them on the 21st instant,—in order that Kansas may be admitted into the Union with the Constitution which the Lecompton Convention has framed. Governor WALKER is unwilling to do so,—partly because he considers the action of that Convention an outrage upon the principle of popular sovereignty, and partly because he does not believe that the people of Kansas can be induced by any consideration to give it their apparent sanction, or even to acquiesce in it.

So far as the question of principle is concerned, Governor WALKER is unquestionably right. The action of the Convention in refusing to permit the people of Kansas to vote upon the Constitution, was in direct hostility, not only to the principle of popular sovereignty, but to every principle of Republican Democracy. The sophistry with which the Washington Union attempts to evade this fact, surpasses the most ingenious hair-splitting of the South Carolina school in audacity, if not in ingenuity. It urges that the Slavery question was the only important topic of agitation, and that it was only upon this single point that the National Democratic Convention at Cincinnati committed the party to the principle of popular sovereignty! Upon every other subject, the Union leaves it to be inferred, the people have no right to the control and regulation of their domestic affairs. Upon every other subject it is perfectly right, and proper, and Democratic, that a minority, or a Convention, or a Dictator should impose upon the inhabitants whatever laws may suit their purposes. LOUIS NAPOLEON did not go so far as this in imposing an imperial Constitution upon the people of France:—he went through the form, at all events, of submitting the whole of it to the popular vote. The Union has hitherto charged it as an offence upon the people of Kansas, that they made the negro question paramount to all others. Now, however, it openly and boldly avows that this is truly the only subject of consequence enough to call for submission to the popular vote.

So far as the principle in question is concerned, Gov. WALKER is, therefore, clearly in the right, and we have very little doubt that if the President is unwise enough to allow the issue to be made upon it, Gov. WALKER will be sustained in his position by the great mass of the People of the Northern States without distinction of party. There are unquestionably some practical advantages in the course advised by Mr. BUCHANAN. It seems to us clearly the interest and the necessity of the majority of the People of Kansas to secure their independence of the Federal Government. Hitherto and now it is the power and the fear of the national authority which prevents them from taking the management of their own affairs into their own hands. Their first necessity is to get rid of this control; and this would be completely and effectually accomplished by their admission as a State into the Union. They would then have precisely the same control over their own affairs as the people of Massachusetts or of Virginia have. They could summon a Convention, frame a Constitution, submit it to the popular vote and carry it into effect within a month from the date of their admission, if they should see fit. This might be a revolution,—but it would be a domestic, a peaceful and a successful revolution. They would fight it out among themselves. The federal government could not interfere. So far as practical results go, the people of Kansas might obtain the sovereignty which has thus far been denied them, in this way more speedily and effectually than in any other. They could protest against the Constitution,—proclaim their purpose to subvert and supersede it at the earliest moment possible,—vote for the exclusion of Slavery,—accede to the plan of admission and then take the reins into their own hands, peaceably if they could, but forcibly if they must.

Judging from present appearances, however, they will not do anything of the kind. The Free-State men, constituting as is universally conceded two-thirds of the population, will probably not vote at all. The Constitution will be adopted with Slavery by a minority vote and sent to Congress;—the majority of the people will protest against it,—and the contest will again be transferred from Kansas to Congress and the nation. We do not believe that the Administration will venture to commit the Democratic Party to the unqualified support of the Lecompton programme,—for nothing can be more certain than the fact that it would be divided and defeated in such an attempt. The great mass of the Northern Democrats will adhere to the principle of Popular Sovereignty and insist upon its being fully and thoroughly recognized in spirit as well as in letter, in the adjustment of the Kansas difficulty.

We think it not at all unlikely that Senator DOUGLAS, or some other prominent member of the Democratic Party, will immediately upon the meeting of Congress, submit an enabling act,—authorizing the Territorial Legislature to summon a Constitutional Convention and provide for the speedy admission of Kansas as a State. This would evade the whole difficulty, satisfy the rational and moderate portion of the whole country and bring this long and vexatious contest to a satisfactory conclusion. Unless some such course is taken we see no way of avoiding the renewal of the disturbances and collisions which have already done so much mischief, not only in Kansas, but in the country at large.

Mr. Fernando Wood and the Germans.

The speech delivered by Mr. FERNANDO WOOD to a meeting of German citizens, held on Saturday night at the Volk's Garten in the Bowery, ought of itself to secure his defeat to-day at the polls of this City. On Friday evening, at the Academy of Music, the actual incumbent of the Mayoralty felt himself to be on his good behavior. He was speaking to an audience clamorous for facts and scornful of fancies. He was addressing an audience by which he was quite sure that the language which he used, however obscure in idiom it might be, would at least, in the main, be understood, and he knew that his words would be speedily subjected to the ordeal of the Press. He, therefore, eluded the critical questions of his own capacity and character—with the not less critical question of his relations with those honest men of all parties by whom he had once been provisionally supported, but by whom he is now most solemnly disowned. He expatiated at length, with some reticence of phrase, and some decency of reflection, upon the wonderful increase in the taxation of the City, and lent his testimony in superfluous, but not unwelcome support, of the very general conviction that for three years past this City has been the most expensively and egregiously misgoverned city of the world.

He left to others less well-informed, and more reckless (if that be possible) than himself, the hopeless task of insisting upon the importance to the "Democratic Party" throughout the nation, of the reelection in New-York, of a man who has been repudiated by almost all the respectability, and by all the authority of that party.

But when he was talking transcendental English to the Germans of the Volk's Garten, Mr. WOOD gave a looser rein to his voluble tongue. He indulged himself in a perfect orgie of misstatements, of agrarian appeals to the presumed passions of the people, of fantastic travesties of the issues laid before us in the election of to-day.

He attacked the landlords of the City for raising their rents, and reiterated the wicked fallacies of his too celebrated "Message," in inflammatory words intended to excite the poor who suffer against the rich who are paralyzed. Imagining, doubtless, that in every German before him he saw a frantic Red Republican, ready to march at a moment's warning from the Arcadian retreats of the Bowery upon the "profligate palaces of the Fifth-avenue," Mr. FERNANDO WOOD denounced the whole generation of capitalists as a set of brawling tyrants, covenanted together to enjoy the fruits of the taxation which the poor, and "only the poor," are condemned to water with their painful sweat. So far as the Germans are concerned, Mr. WOOD of course made a ridiculous mistake. The Germans of New-York are not a rabble, as Mayor WOOD and his supporters take them to be, but a city. In point of numbers—of social organization, of credit and character—of general industry and of general prosperity, our German fellow-citizens may be fairly held to constitute a community. They enjoy the rights, they fulfill the duties, and they comprehend the obligations of a community; and the example of one Tiemann, born of their blood and reared in the honest traditions of German honor, good faith and decency, will more avail with them as a lesson of the true principles of political economy and of the true laws which should govern an intelligent Democracy in the discharge of their public duties, than the flagrant and communistic vehemence of a dozen Woods, or a hundred Mac Mahons.

The Germans will answer the incendiary nonsense of Mayor WOOD at the polls. But the rest of our citizens are called upon to answer it also; for, though it was not addressed directly to them, its issues are of a kind which must affect them nearly. And, if there be a single conservative citizen in New-York, who has hitherto been blinded to the character and the creed of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, we call upon him to-day to open his eyes and see what manner of man this is who claims to rule New-York by a similar "diabolic" tenure to that which gives BRIGHAM YOUNG his hold upon the besotted Mormons. Here, on the eve of a municipal election, Mr. FERNANDO WOOD flits for a moment, as he fancies, out of sight of the lynxes of the Press, and cleverly niching himself, to use his own words, as a "conditioned being in Time," among the Teutons of the Bowery, there revives all the worst doctrines of his socialistic message, though in a form more bald and bad. He does this because he supposes himself to be talking to just that class among us whose previous political experience, under the despotisms of Germany, would dispose them to accept agrarianism as a philosophy, and to put its faith into works on the first convenient opportunity. That he have made a blunder—that the citizens whom he addressed happen to resent the insult conveyed in his appeals, does not affect the matter at all so far as he, the Mayor, is concerned. It is none the less certain that he talked plunder, pillage, the array of class against class, and all the commonplaces of agrarian declamation on Saturday night, because he thought that by such talking he should secure a certain number of votes. And it is none the less certain that every decent citizen, of whatever party, who votes this day for FERNANDO WOOD, votes for a man whose own words uttered on Saturday night last prove him to be the disorganizing socialistic and unprincipled demagogue which he has been pronounced to be, not only by the sober voice of the thousands who have lived under his rule, but by all the leaders of that great political party to which he professes to belong, and by Democratic officials of every rank, from the President at Washington to the Marshal at New-York, and from the District Attorney, whose function it is to prosecute criminals, to the Assessors of the Ward where they reside, who have had ample opportunity to form a correct estimate of his character, and who have had the opportunity to see his own conduct and to feel the sullen gravity of silver and of gold.

The Party of the City.

The election, to-day, will show very conclusively whether the people of this City can, and will, take care of their own interests, or not. They have to choose between two candidates for Mayor,—one of whom is a man of integrity and character, and nominated by men of all parties, solely upon grounds of the public welfare, while the other stands exclusively as the representative of a political party. It remains to be seen whether our citizens have independence enough to discard the obligations and the dictates of party, in an election with which party has nothing whatever to do, and to provide for their own good government and the security of their lives and property. The issue has never been so fairly presented before, and we can scarcely imagine any case in which it can be so directly met hereafter.

The partisans of Mayor WOOD demand that every Democrat shall vote for him, because he is the regular nominee of the Democratic Party. If this were a political election,—if it were a contest of political principles, or even calculated to show the relative strength of political parties, there would be, at least, some show of reason in the requisition. But it is not, in any sense or to any extent, a political contest. On the contrary, the election has been expressly separated by law from the political contests of the day, and has been fixed a month after the State election for the express purpose of excluding all State and National issues from the canvass. It is solely and exclusively a City election. It relates wholly to City interests:—and a man might just as well be required to consult party interests in the arrangement of his own domestic affairs, as in an election so purely local as this.

Those Democratic papers at a distance, which are representing this as a trial of party strength, will see reason to regret their mistake: for whether Mayor WOOD be reelected or not, his vote will be far behind that cast for the Democratic ticket a month ago. If this is to be regarded, therefore, as a political contest, the inevitable inference will be that the Democratic Party has lost ground very much since that time; and if, as seems probable, he should be beaten, these same papers will be quoted to show that the Democratic Party has been defeated.

The people of the City know perfectly well how utterly unfounded are these representations. The election is not a party contest, and will not be so regarded—in spite of the efforts of Mayor WOOD and his backers to have it so considered. It is a struggle between the respectable and the orderly men of all parties on the one hand, against men who are using all the arts of partizanship to perpetuate the anarchy, mistrust and corruption which have, for the last two years, brought upon this City the contempt and disgust of the whole country.

ANOTHER NEW TERRITORY.—Among the passengers by the Northern Light, yesterday, was JAMES M. CRANE, Esq., of California, who is on his way to Washington as the representative of the people of the Great Basin, or Carson Valley, who are desirous of having the portion of Utah lying near the boundary of California, erected into a new Territory, separate from the Mormon dominion. The proposed Territory embraces all the region lying between the Sierra Nevada on the west, the Goose Creek range of Mountains on the east, Oregon and Utah on the north, and the Colorado on the south. The white inhabitants of this immense and fertile tract number about eight thousand, while the Indians of the various tribes which inhabit it exceed a hundred thousand. The Indians are represented as not unfriendly to the whites, or "Americans" as they are absurdly called, nor unfavorable to a new Territory. The Great Basin possesses immense mineral resources, abounding in gold, silver, and copper, while the valleys are extremely fertile. The people there are living in a perfectly unorganized state, without any form of government whatever, and subject to no constituted authority. The Mormons cannot exercise any control over them, for they will not pay tithes to the Saints; California cannot give them any aid, as they do not come within the jurisdiction of that State, and they are too far removed from both Oregon and New-Mexico to have any connection with the Governments of those Territories. As Mr. CRANE goes to Washington to present the claims of the Great Basin to the protection of the Government, we presume there will be no obstacles in the way to prevent the District from being erected into a separate Territory at the same time with the new Territory of Arizona. One of the serious difficulties which the people of the proposed new Territory labor under, is that they have not yet been able to invent a name for themselves. The only, or principal, town in the country is called Genoa, and they have proposed calling the Territory Columbus, in compliment to the discoverer of the New World; but they will do better to find a name of local significance.

BROAD HINTS TO WORKING-MEN.—Mayor WOOD's organ has a very peculiar way of doing its patrons a service by informing the working-men of this City that they cannot obtain employment if they are even suspected of being "Wood men." On Saturday the Mayor's organ published the affidavit of an unfortunate laborer in the effect that he was denied work on the Central Park by one of the Commissioners, upon the express ground that no man who was known to be a friend to Mayor WOOD should be employed; and yesterday the Wood organ informed its readers that the Superintendent of the Assay-Office had given orders that all the men in that Department who voted for Mayor WOOD on Tuesday might consider themselves discharged. As this is doubtless a pretty correct indication of the feeling which animates the Superintendents of all the public offices in the City, as well as the proprietors of private establishments, the poor laborers may judge advisedly on which side of the Mayoralty question their bread is likely to be buttered. If the Mayor's organ is to be credited, and it seems to be in the case, it is no wonder the election of to-day is already [illegible] to be the laboring men of New-York. If only as we work,—of honest labor with HONESTY, or idleness and poverty with WOOD.

Mr. BOTTENWORTH, the Superintendent of the Assay Office, in his published card has put the matter in a very clear and intelligible shape, and given the best possible reason for not wishing to have any man about him who votes for WOOD. Mr. BOTTENWORTH has been looking into the public and private history of our Mayor, and plainly says, without any circumlocution, that any man who will support WOOD cannot be a "suitable man to handle bullion." This is a terrible thing to be said of a candidate for such an office as that of Mayor of New-York. But it is according to the old adage, that a man is known by the company he keeps. In this case it is the more terrible because there is no partizan feeling connected with it. Mr. BOTTENWORTH belongs to the same political party which has been made to nominate WOOD, and it must have required conviction of his unfitness which could induce him to take so strong and decided a stand against his election. But Mr. BOTTENWORTH is responsible for the gold which passes through the Assay Office, and therefore he deems it necessary to have unexceptional men about him. He cannot allow any person to remain in his department who is a supporter of Mayor WOOD. Now, if the Superintendent of a public office feels himself impelled to this course in respect to his laborers, how much more will every private citizen feel himself bound to act in a similar manner, as a measure of prudence.

Medicine for the Mayor.

The friends of Mayor WOOD, driven to desperation by the dangerous condition of their patient's health, are putting up their prayers to ESCULAPIUS. "Millions of the mess," as they are, and votaries of MERCURY, they have discovered or fancy that they have discovered a notable way on the character of Mr. TIEMANN, by virtue of which they expect to recondilate the disordered energies of their fainting FERNANDO. These gentlemen, conspicuous among whom is Mr. MCGEHEAN, solemnly aver that Mr. DANIEL F. TIEMANN, did once chicanitously endeavor to introduce certain "Homœopathic physicians" into the Bellevue Hospital.

What Mr. TIEMANN's object in this nefarious attempt may have been, the three witnesses above said do not set forth. Perhaps he had a "contract for globules;" perhaps he was interested in a new machine for "trituration;" perhaps he desired to bring the Homœopathic establishment to public shame and confusion by contrasting them with the "regular physicians," and demonstrating their impotence in the presence of the learned and the gallipots. Or perhaps the Homœopathic physicians were some unhappy lunatics, brought near to death's door by their own devices, and desirous of quietus and of peace, whom therefore Mr. TIEMANN charitably proposed to subject to the healing talents of allopathy, and so restore to the world and possibly to a more regular practice and a more sensible way of life.

On all these points Mr. MCGEHEAN and his friends are yet to be heard from.

Meanwhile it is pretty clear that by the statement in question, Mr. MCGEHEAN and his friends hope to do Mr. TIEMANN a signal injury. They wish to scare the honest good people of New-York into a notion that if Mr. TIEMANN is elected he may will over beneath to see from Homœopathy and his phials. "Do you love the memory of your childhood?" they say, "then vote for WOOD!" "Do you value the integrity of your children?" "Then vote for WOOD!" "Do you respect the black drop of your mother?" "Then vote for WOOD!"

Now we beg leave to say that we know several thousand citizens who propose to vote for TIEMANN to-morrow, but who will never consent to shoulder calomel, or to spare the lancettes of Mr. MCGEHEAN. For ourselves, we abhor the thought of treason to the faculty, and we hold the phials of Mr. MCGEHEAN in as great horror as the mouldy floor of Mayor WOOD. And if we believed that Mr. TIEMANN was capable of raising the infidelitarian banner of potencies and dilutions upon the flagstaff of the City Hall, we should be the first in the fray with the conservative probe and the syringe of respectability. But we must be excused for a little skepticism in regard to an assertion so entirely unexpected and so laboriously foreign to all the questions at issue in the election of to-day, that we can only regard it as proving one thing, namely: That the friends of Mr. WOOD expect to see Mr. TIEMANN Mayor of this City to-morrow morning. We devoutly trust that in this expectation they may not be disappointed. If we entertained much doubt on the subject we might be at the pains of proving that Mr. WOOD, after at one time countenancing to the hyena of Thomsonianism, did subsequently embrace the grave heresy of Electro-Magnetism,—and at divers times secretly attempted the extirpation of certain unseemly warts by subtle processes of unlawful magic performed with a knotted cord and a piece of raw beef.

Anniversary Meeting of the Poles.

The twenty-ninth of November, 1830, is a day of commemoration among Polish exiles all over the world. On that day a mere handful of Polish young men, all of them—one hundred and twenty in number, made a descent on the garrison at Warsaw, put 1,800 of the Russian cavalry to flight, fought successful battles with other Russian troops, and having driven them from the city, kept the mastery of that city against the Russian forces for eleven months.

The anniversary day falling this year upon Sunday, the event was celebrated yesterday, at the large rooms, No. 55 Forsyth-street. Dr. L. SZPARSKE occupied the chair. JULIUS ALLES was appointed Vice-President, and W. KOSZKIEWICZ Secretary.

The Vice-President, Mr. ALLES, read to the audience, in the English language, the address of the day, written in Polish by Mr. RASTEWSKI. It commemorated the great deeds of November 29, "the twin-sister of July 4," recapitulated the world-known wrongs which Poland has endured, and dwelt with just pride and emphasis on the heroism of CZARNECKI, KOSCIUSZKO, PULAWSKI and PONIATOWSKI. The name of KOSCIUSZKO was the watchword of patriotism. The address terminated with the hope that the time was not far distant when Poles would meet to celebrate the freedom of their beloved country.

The author of this address, Mr. RASTEWSKI, next read it to the audience in the Polish language. It was enthusiastically received. The Cincinnati gleaner wants one in German.

A speech in the Polish language was then made by Mr. KOSZKIEWICZ, after which Dr. SZPARSKE spoke briefly in German. He said he loved Poland, and his own country was known as the asylum of the exiles of all countries. He added [illegible] that Poland from the World did, "Let them not [illegible] Poland would not be free.

[illegible] was then read in German, in English, written by K. WYSZOMIRSKI, one of the patriots of 1830, in which he offered all his money and talents for the cause of the revolution.

The meeting then adjourned. The [illegible] among the decorations of the room a Polish [illegible] eagle in white upon a red [illegible] the eagle's neck, with the inscription, "[illegible]," meaning "God and the people." In [illegible] there were more than one hundred Poles from the United States there are not probably more than the [illegible]. The meeting last night was not numerous, it was [illegible] and heavily [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. SAM. FOSTER made his début [illegible] and was received with [illegible] by an extraordinarily overcrowded [illegible]. A few such gatherings will bring management [illegible] Mr. HERMANN—which of late has been [illegible] in trouble, care and perspiration. The performance was in every respect an admirable one, [illegible] of Bertram, by Mr. FOSTER, a [illegible] of true greatness in lyric art. [illegible] Robert le Diable" in an opera which all [illegible] equal, will bear resuscitation at long [illegible]. It is a splendid piece for the eye, containing [illegible] for the ear, and some other things for [illegible] of the principal singers. With a [illegible] company, splendid scenery, gorgeous [illegible] and a most ballet it can be made to go, in Northern heaviness, and a plot, which, for [illegible] beats everything on the Italian stage. On [illegible] occasion Mr. FOSTER was supported by [illegible] members of Mr. ULLMAN's company, and made his debut under circumstances gratifying to himself as well as to the audience. Below [illegible] the cast now and in 1851 when the same [illegible] played at the Astor-place Opera House [illegible]:

Dec. 1857.	Dec. 1851.
Mad. DE LA GRANGE.	Signora STEFFANONE.
Mlle. CARROLL.	Signora BOSIO.
Signor BENEDETTI.	Signor BETTINI.
Signor LABLACHE.	Signor VIRTU.
Herr FOSTER.	Signor MARINI.
Signorina ROLLA.	Mad. CARADORI.

[illegible] are worth putting on record, for there [illegible] in the world where they can be [illegible]. Our Bertrams have been the profoundest [illegible] of the age, and the greatest artists also. It may justly be said that after Signor MARINI [illegible] but one man who could remove the impressibility, magnificent organ created—and [illegible] Herr FOSTER is our present in[illegible]. To him, therefore, we give the place of [illegible]. Unfortunately, Herr FOSTER was laboring [illegible] severe attack of indisposition; but with [illegible] which was admirable, he declined to [illegible] made known, and in spite of Dr. MORS, [illegible] to fill his rôle. The fact deserves to be [illegible], for those who were delighted last night, [illegible] delighted in the next performance. The [illegible] of the bass voice was never more [illegible] exemplified than in Mr. FOSTER' case.

[illegible] present occasion we shall deal only in [illegible] the interest of the hour preventing our [illegible] this specific criticism which the occasion [illegible] Herr FOSTER displayed not only the merits [illegible] vocalist but the power of a great actor. [illegible] dramatic interest has never been thrown [illegible] character of Bertram. Executive ability [illegible] a prominent degree, and in spite of bad [illegible] books it is evident that he sings much [illegible] than he did on the occasion of his début in [illegible]. He was called out after every act. Mme. [illegible] as Alice was truly admirable, and Mlle. [illegible] the Princess more than justified the high [illegible] of her concert performances. The other [illegible] shall refer to in another notice, contenting [illegible] with some facts which deserve to be known [illegible].

[illegible] has proved in this opera that he is a [illegible] and liberal manager of the opera. He has [illegible]'s work on the stage in a way [illegible] never been equaled in this country. The [illegible] are not only magnificent, but varied and [illegible] the scenery and mechanical effects thoroughly, and the general mise-en-scene careful [illegible]. In all respects the opera is artistically [illegible] rendered. There are no weak points; [illegible] and completely from beginning to [illegible] the ballet, which is usually neglected, is [illegible] conscientiously, and Signorina ROLLA, (we [illegible] one of the most fascinating Prioressas we [illegible].

[illegible] crowded state of the house (there [illegible] thousand dollars represented it—the [illegible], we believe, ever taken at a single [illegible] performance here or elsewhere) interfered [illegible] with the quiet [illegible] that with [illegible] much was heard and appreciated [illegible] yesday the second performance of "Robert" will be given.

The Adriatic had made 866 miles westing.

Shocking Case of Kidnapping.

On Friday afternoon a woman named Mrs. WALLACE, called at the Second Precinct Police Station, and made complaint to Capt. WIGGINS that her brother, ALEXANDER CHALMERS, a sailor, had been forcibly taken to and detained on board the packet James A. Westervelt, which was then lying in the stream, and about to sail for Liverpool. She stated that her brother had taken lodgings at the boarding-house of HENRY BOOKMAN, No. 78 Roosevelt-street, a few days previously, and that while there he was knocked down and cruelly beaten, and robbed of all the money in his possession, amounting to $14. He was then confined in a room for many hours, and was, during the night, conveyed stealthily on board a vessel lying in the stream. The captain of the vessel examined the man, and finding that he had been so badly beaten as to unfit him for duty, refused to receive him. He was then reconveyed to his prison, where he was again cuffed and beaten most brutally. Soon afterwards an arrangement was made between BOOKMAN and the mate of the Westervelt, and poor CHALMERS was conveyed on board that vessel and secreted in the forecastle.

The woman was referred to Recorder SMITH, who issued a writ of habeas corpus which was placed in the hands of Officers HAYS, DAVENPORT and PHILIPS of the Second Precinct Police. They visited the vessel designated on Saturday, and searched it, but were unable to find the person alleged to be detained. Not yet satisfied, they returned to the vessel yesterday afternoon, and renewed their search, though the officers of the ship denied all knowledge of CHALMERS. The forecastle and almost every nook and corner of the vessel was examined, but without finding the object of their search. At length Officer HAYS bethought him to visit the foretop, and there, covered up with canvass, poor CHALMERS maimed and bruised was found secreted. Standing near by was the boatswain of the ship holding a rope, with which he threatened to beat the prisoner should he attempt any outcry.

CHALMERS was taken to the Tombs where he made his complaint, and was detained as a witness. Another unfortunate was found in BOOKMAN's house, and he too was taken away by the officers.

BOOKMAN was soon afterwards arrested, and held to answer in the sum of $2,000.

It is said that BOOKMAN has been carrying on this kidnapping business for a long time, and in a manner so flagrant as, in the opinion of Recorder SMITH, to secure his incarceration at Sing Sing.

Fires.

IN COMMERCE-STREET.—On Saturday, at 3½ P.M., a fire broke out in the two-story wooden dwelling-house No. 29 Commerce-street, occupied by THOMAS RILEY. The fire originated from a defective stove-pipe passing through the roof. The entire upper part of the building was burned. Mr. RILEY lost about $100. Mrs. MARY ZIMMERMAN, who occupied a portion of the attic, sustained a loss of $200. Neither were insured. FRANCIS TILLOU owned the building—loss $700—insured. The building adjoining was damaged considerably by water.

IN WEST-STREET.—At 12½ o'clock, on Saturday, a fire broke out in the lumber yard of BUNKER, BOULIER & WELLS, in West-street, near King. The loss was covered by insurance. The fire communicated to the cooper-shop of W. BENNELL, adjoining, which was entirely consumed. Insured. Supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

☞ The clerks in the County Clerk's office were very busy, all day yesterday, swearing in Inspectors and Canvassers. The entire number—1,050—was very nearly filled up. Those who have not already taken the oath at the County Clerk's office will be qualified this morning, each by the Alderman and Councilman of his Ward and District, or by the other Inspectors, already duly appointed and qualified.

Personal.

A young woman in Milford, Conn., recently answered a matrimonial advertisement in a New-York paper, in sport, but a reply came speedily, and as she took it from the Post-Office she made the acquaintance of the advertiser, one Victor Bard, who went up to Milford with the letter. Bard [illegible] the ass, Romeo, got himself pulled in the boat pa[illegible] for his exploits with the girl, and was sent on the end of the machine, and Bard was arrested as a cheater and blackguard. The young lady's indignation [illegible] consolate.

Two Methodist ministers in North Carolina, Messrs. Edwards and Rosser, have been "disciplined" for indulgence in the game of ten-pins at the Virginia Springs last Summer. They pleaded guilty, expressed regret for the act, stated that they were not conscious of intention to do wrong, and promised not to do so any more. The Conference which tried them, in session at Elizabeth City, accepted the acknowledgment, and permitted them to continue their functions.

Rev. Samuel Hanson Cox, D. D., in appending his name to the address of American Clergy to the Berlin Alliance, wrote: "We cannot be with you, my dear Sir Culling Eardley, but can subscribe this address, with the prayer that Christ may be with you and guide and bless in all things! Le Roy, Genesee County, N. Y., 40 miles from that great wonder of God—the Cataract of Niagara! Salutem precamur omnes."

A petition is being circulated in Washington and Georgetown addressed to the Governor of New-Jersey, to have the death sentence recently passed on James P. Donnelly commuted to imprisonment for life.

Leading citizens of Albany have tendered a complimentary testimonial to Dr. C. H. F. Peters, the astronomer, on the occasion of the dissolution of his connection with the Dudley Observatory.

Obituary.

Mr. George R. Gliddon, formerly U. S. Consul in Egypt, died at Panama on the 16th inst., aged 50. He was an Englishman, but passed a large part of his life in Egypt, where he became an enthusiastic explorer of the archæological remains of the country, and made valuable contributions to craniology. Mr. Gliddon was the author of an essay on the production of cotton in the Valley of the Nile, and of an appeal to Europe against the destruction of Egyptian monuments by Mehemet Ali. His last literary effort was the production of the "Types of Mankind," in conjunction with Dr. Nott, of Mobile. At the time of his death he occupied the post of Deputy-Agent of the Honduras Inter-Oceanic Railroad Company, and he was on leave of absence from the works of that Company, when he was attacked at Panama by fatal illness.

Brevet Second Lieutenant John H. Gronewall, who served in the Mexican War, died on Friday last in Baltimore, aged 33 years. He was buried with military honors on Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Dickson W. Lewis, a preacher well known in Washington, died in the Choctaw Nation on the 12th October.

Whittaker, of Vicksburg; Mrs. Bond, Memphis, Tenn.; Thos. Leske, Washitaw County, Ark.; an aged Irishwoman from Baton Rouge to Memphis; a German brass foundryman—family in New-Albany, Ind.; Saml. Phillips, Derby, Ind.; —— Wheatly, Derby, Ind.; Coffman and partner, flatboatmen, from Rumsey, Ky.

The United States officers have been resisted, and there has been a great row at Hamilton, Ohio. A merchant of that town, named N. P. Curtis, being in failing circumstances, undertook to dispose of his goods in a manner unsatisfactory to eastern creditors. The latter employed attorneys of Cincinnati. On Wednesday evening writs of attachment were placed in the hands of United States Deputy Marshal Elliot, who proceeded to serve them. In attempting to take possession of the property Elliot was resisted, on the ground that the goods had been privately purchased by Mr. Beatty. Marshal Elliot drew a revolver, and succeeded in getting possession. The contesting parties, however, were not satisfied or content to permit the Marshal to retain possession; and during the temporary absence of Elliot they ejected his deputy and took possession of the house, guarding it with revolvers.

The Ironton Bank of Ohio, which lately repulsed General E. B. Tyler, of Raxenna, who presented its notes for payment, has been punished. General Tyler was not a broker, but an agent of the American Fur Company, annually disbursing large sums of money in the purchase of furs in Ohio and Western Virginia. He again presented himself at the counter last Friday with about $16,000 in notes. He was accompanied by a half dozen friends. A faint attempt was made to get up the mob, the bells rung and several hundred men gathered around the General, but the Bank officers caved in, and counted out the $16,000 in gold.

The entire military force now in Florida has been ordered to take the field against the Indians. The State Volunteers number 2,000 men.

A mule race came off the same day for a purse of $50; mile heats, best 2 in 3, carrying catch weights, and no distance, for which there were twelve entries. Katydid won. There was great merriment over this novel species of sport.

THE WRONG PERSON ARRESTED.—A man named DYGERT was arrested Saturday night, by the Third Precinct Police, Brooklyn, for attempting to stab another man in the street. It appears that the accused, upon coming out of a saloon at the corner of Atlantic and Court streets, was followed by several of the rowdies who are to be seen every night hanging about these corners. Their intention was to rob him as they had served many persons before, but Mr. D. was on his guard, and when they approached too near he drew a knife. The villains seeing a policeman near at hand raised an alarm, and caused Mr. D. to be arrested for threatening to use the knife. The case was explained on Sunday and he was discharged.

☞ THE PORT JEFFERSON MURDER.—We are happy to be able to state that Mrs. MARTHA J. STURTEVANT (the wife and daughter of the murdered persons at Port Jefferson, L. I.) is recovering. Her physicians Dr. BARTLES, of Miller's Place, L. I., and Dr. DORING, of Setauket, think her now out of danger. Mrs. STURTEVANT received a number of severe wounds upon the head, and it was much feared at first they would prove fatal.

BROOKLYN COMMON COUNCIL.—A regular meeting of this body was held, last evening, and a large amount of routine business was transacted.

At the suggestion of the Comptroller, the Mayor and Comptroller were authorized to borrow money to pay the Police.

The Water Committee reported in favor of advancing $100,000 out of the reserved fund to enable the contractors to continue the water works. After considerable discussion, there being a doubt whether the Board could legally make the advance, the whole matter was referred to the Law Committee for report next Monday evening.

☞ The Police of Brooklyn made 84 arrests during the 48 hours ending yesterday morning. During the same time 92 persons were accommodated with lodgings at the different Station-houses.

NEW-JERSEY.

MILITARY.—A meeting of the officers of the Hudson Brigade was held at Odd-Fellows' Hall on Friday evening—Brigadier Gen. HAYFIELD presiding—at which a Committee of two from each Company was appointed to take into consideration the propriety of adopting a brigade uniform. If the Committee decides that it is expedient, they will report a bill of dress to the Brigade Board.

A new Military Company is being organized in Jersey City, to be called the Jersey City National Guard. One hundred names have been enrolled as members.

The military tax collected in Hudson County last year, amounting to $700, was last week apportioned to the different Companies.

The Jersey City Continentals have passed a resolution adopting full regulation uniforms, and a Committee has been appointed to procure them.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERS' CASE.—In the matter of the Hoboken Water Commissioners who were recently dismissed by the Council for alleged mal-administration in office, PHILIP MULFORD, Esq., counsel for the Commissioners, made application on Friday to the Supreme Court of the State for a writ of certiorari to bring the case before that tribunal. The application was granted, and Under-Sheriff FRANCIS on Saturday served the writ upon the Mayor and Council of Hoboken. The matter will be argued before the Supreme Bench at Trenton, to-day.

POCKET PICKED.—A man, name unknown, who was on his way to Chicago, had his pocket picked at the New-York and Erie Railroad dépôt, in Jersey City, yesterday morning, of a wallet containing $250. It was all the money he had, and the unexpected loss compelled him to defer his trip. The light-fingered fraternity are in constant attendance at the Railroad dépôts in Jersey City, and travelers would do well to be on their guard when in that locality.

FIRE.—The Cement manufactory of P. D. VAN SICKLE, in Greene-street, Jersey City, took fire on Friday night, but was discovered and extinguished before it had made much progress. The damage done is estimated at $100.

CUSTOM-HOUSE APPOINTMENT.—Mr. WM. DINGLEE of the Fourth Ward, Jersey City, has been appointed by Collector SCHELL a night inspector in the Custom-house.

☞ A new time-table has been issued for the New-Jersey Railroad, in which a number of changes are announced in the running of trains. It goes into effect to-day.

S. C. HERRING & CO.'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The subscribers, grateful for past favors, and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their dépôt, by opening an extensive warerooms and salesroom on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture, for the security of plate and jewelry, (and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also, will keep on hand and make to order all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults, Hall's patent powder-proof locks for banks or store doors, Jones' patent permutation bank lock, and Gryglar's patent letter lock, without key.

WAUPUN, WIS., Aug. 24, 1857.
Mr. LAWRENCE BORNELL, Milwaukee,
Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes:
DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you that the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY—PROPOSALS FOR LOAN.—Subscriptions will be received at the office of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, in the City of New-York, until the first day of November, 1857, for the purchase of $4,000,000 of the Bonds of the Company, redeemable on the first October, 1880, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, on the first days of April and October.

They will be sold at par payable as follows:

50 per cent. in any of the unsecured Bonds of the company, redeemable in 1862, 1871 and 1876.

10 per cent. in cash at the time of subscribing.

40 per cent. in monthly instalments of 10 per cent., or in cash, at the option of the purchasers.

These Bonds are guaranteed by a Mortgage on the entire road and its franchises, on all the leasehold property of the Company, including the wharves, ferry privileges and landed property of the Long Dock Company of Jersey City, and on the entire equipment of the Company.

The object of the loan is to fund the present floating debt of the Company, and to obtain means to continue the construction of the tunnel, dépôt, wharves, and other improvements on the Long Dock property. It will only increase the present indebtedness of the Company about $1,000,000. The following is a comparative statement of the past and present financial position of the Company:

	1855. Sept. 30.	1856. Sept. 30.	1857. Aug. 1.
Capital Stock	$10,028,069	$10,600,000	$11,000,000
Funded Debt	24,891,000	24,891,000	24,891,000
Floating Debt	1,217,769	1,104,970	2,009,135
Interest on Bonds due 1st August, less am't deposited to meet it	—	—	192,268
Total indebtedness	$36,136,768	$36,595,970	$37,092,420
Cash and Cash items	$180,786	$600,356	$127,077
Materials	304,625	503,541	330,000
Fuel	497,115	728,463	430,000
Amount rent proprietors on Lake Erie	88,875	218,331	261,329
Rolling Stock loaned to C. & N. E. R. R.	100,000	100,000	100,000
Other Assets	10,456	46,234	28,509
Due by Agents	—	—	251,066
Advanced to Long Dock Company	—	—	430,521
Bonds of 1875 in Sinking Fund	322,006	794,000	1,315,500
	$1,703,857	$2,690,425	$3,643,902
Liabilities over Assets	$34,396,911	$33,905,545	$33,376,518

That the expenditures of the Long Dock Company are judicious, and sure to prove profitable to the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, no one can doubt who will examine the subject. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company have a lease (with the right to purchase at the original cost at any time after six years) of the entire property of the Long Dock Company, consisting of over 2,000 lots of ground, exclusive of the streets opened or to be opened, with ferry privileges, ferry slips and wharves now in construction. The wharves will offer 7,740 linear feet of berth room. Vessels drawing over 20 feet of water will receive the heavy products of the West directly from the cars, or from warehouses into which the cars will run and be unloaded in any weather, without damage or injury to property. The facilities and economy which this will offer to shippers and receivers must largely increase the traffic of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, and enable it to charge higher rates for transportation than those charged by other routes. The ferries will undoubtedly prove a source of revenue to the Company, whereas, at present, the ferriage of passengers and merchandise is a heavy tax on the Company.

Any portion of the 2,500 lots not needed by the New-York and Erie Railroad Company can be sold at any time, and by the terms of the lease the proceeds must be applied to the extinguishment or to the creation of a Sinking Fund for the extinguishment of the debt incurred for the improvement of the Long Dock property. The value of this property must be very great whenever the New-York and Erie Company transfer their traffic to the new terminus.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT OF BUCHU.

For nervous and debilitated sufferers, and removes all the symptoms, viz.: Loss of power, loss of memory, general weakness, dimness of vision, languor and universal lassitude of the muscular system, temporary confusion, loss of sight, inability, &c.

If these symptoms are allowed to go on, (which this medicine invariably removes,) soon follow fatuity and epileptic fits. Who can say that these excesses are not frequently followed by those direful diseases—Insanity and Consumption?

The records of Insane Asylums, and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness of the truth of this assertion.

Wan woful measures, wan Despair,
Low sullen sounds his grief beguiled.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT OF BUCHU gives

Health and vigor to the frame,
And bloom to the pallid cheek.

If you are suffering from any of the above distressing ailments, procure the remedy at once.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character open to the inspection of all.

Price $1 per bottle, or six for $5, delivered to any address.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Times.

[By the Associated Telegraph Co.'s Lines—Office No. 21 Wall-street.]

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Federal Officers and Mayor Wood—Ministers to Spain, France and Central America—Administration Candidate for Speakership, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 30.

I am confident in saying, on the best authority, that the statement that the President has had the least idea of interfering with the movements of the Federal officers against Mayor WOOD. Considering them best qualified to determine what sort of character is desirable in a Mayor, he is quite content to leave them to follow their own inclinations.

Notwithstanding the very positive denials of any intention that Governor BANCROFT is designed by the President for the mission to Madrid, I repeat the assertion, leaving to time to vindicate its accuracy. I am well aware that the Executive has not announced the fact, nor intimated, he is engaged in efforts to clear the way for Mr. BANCROFT's nomination. "In order to consummate great measures I must have the support of great minds," said Mr. BUCHANAN some days after his inauguration, in reference to his policy in connection with the Government of Cuba.

I have already intimated the unwillingness of Mr. BANCROFT to accept the French Mission, but he cannot well resist the earnest solicitations of the President; and I reiterate the declaration that he will go to Paris next Spring. If it shall seem clear that his place in the Senate can be filled by as warm a supporter of the Administration, whose views in all other respects agreeable to the present Senator.

The report that Colonel HARNEY, Editor of the Union, is offered an Minister to Central America, excites a good deal of surprise. Certain it is, that the Administration is desirous of finding him some other place than the editorial chair. His constant association with Judge L. WRIGHT, when he was here engineering for the reception of LAMAMAE, has probably attracted the attention of the President, and indicated that he takes interest enough in Central American affairs to be willing to accept the place. If he should be appointed, the Transit speculators will doubtless endorse the selection as an eminently advantageous one. If the Colonel had a little more extended experience in organizing, he would be abundantly qualified for diplomacy—at least in its chief duty of mere commissioner. The columns of the Union, during the last six months, present abundant evidence of his aptness in that direction.

Those who doubt the fitness of Gen. LANER for this mission greatly underrate the man. With the ripe experience of a long and active life, he combines physical vigor equal to any vicissitudes of climate or any demands upon his powers of endurance. Those who know him best say that, simple and unpretending though he seems, ordinarily, when called upon to fulfill an important duty, he is full of resources, and proves himself possessed of sleepless vigilance. He is, besides, familiar with the character of the shrewd and wily people of Spanish America. Col. WALKER, who has been mentioned in connection with this post, is unquestionably the best fitted for the peculiar service required, of any man named; but he will not be appointed until superior fitness ceases to be the chief consideration in the selection of diplomatic agents.

French policy likely to become a factor in the estimate which is already arresting between the United States and Central America, to which I recently referred, the great object of which is to secure the control, including Cuba, in our tender mercies, and the old record in the contests of France and England, with the exception of such incidental acquisitions as the United States require in the East for the development of American Commerce. It is upon the effect of this scheme certainly that Mr. BUCHANAN stakes, in great measure, his hopes of succeeding in his Cuban enterprise.

The fact that Colonel ORR, of South Carolina, is the Administration candidate for Speaker of the House of Representatives, is very evident to experienced observers here. Secretary COBB is understood to be his special advocate in the Cabinet. Private communications by the Executive branch of the Government in behalf of some particular candidate for the presiding officer of the House, have become the rule of late years. The object, of course, is to secure to the Administration the aid of the Speaker in the support of any policy it may adopt—which becomes doubly important at a time like the present, when a split of the dominant party, upon a vital issue, seems inevitable, involving the alienation of one wing of the other from the Executive. True, such combinations are un-Democratic, constituting, as they do, Executive plans for evading the spirit of the Administration Constitution, which seeks, in every possible way, to decentralize the Government, and distribute its power so that each branch shall be a check upon every other; but principle, now-a-days, in political life, is too seldom allowed its just triumph over temporary expediency, and until a House of Representatives shall be found independent enough to resist the decision of the Executive branch of the Government, the Administration, supported by a dominant party in that body, will always place its creature in the Chair.

Members and strangers are beginning to flock in, and the party caucuses are boiling. ROUSSEAU, for Clerk of the House, seems achieving much success in canvassing. He changes so night are deemed better than ALLEN. MERRIAT CHESTER will be elected Doorkeeper.

In the Naval Courts, the case of Passed-Midshipman FRASER was commenced to-day. S.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 30.

The Government employes were, on Saturday and to-day, paid nearly altogether in silver, which is a depreciation compared with gold.

SILAS H. COLEMAN, of New-York, has been appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, Agent for the Indians in that State.

The Court of Claims resumed its session to-day, and no adverse decision was delivered in the case of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

Arrest of Tuckerman, Ex-Treasurer of the Eastern Railroad, Portland, for Mail Robbery.

PORTLAND, Tuesday, Nov. 30.

W. S. TUCKERMAN, formerly Treasurer of the Eastern Railroad, Boston, was arrested last night at New-Haven, for mail robbery. He is now in jail and confesses his guilt.

BOSTON, Monday, Nov. 30.

The arrest of W. S. TUCKERMAN, it is thought, will explain the robbery of the Havana mail for the State of Maine, reaching about the 21st of November; also, the mail from Portland, for New-York and the mail from Boston for New-York—all missing on the New-Haven line at about the same time. The missing Havana mail contained about 500 letters, 100 of which were for merchants of Portland and doubtless contained many remittances.

The evidence against TUCKERMAN is deemed conclusive, and it is understood he confesses his guilt. His operations were mainly on Sunday night trains. He would take his baggage at New-York with a large trunk, in which was a carpet bag, containing clothing. To make it heavy, and during the temporary absence of the baggage master he would steal a mail bag and deposit it in his trunk. He acknowledges having had quantities of stolen postage stamps. Five hundred letters in bills on the Lee Bank of Massachusetts were found upon him.

The Philadelphia mail for Boston with others being missed, the general railroad superintendents on the New-York and Boston route, the Postmasters and special agent HOLBROOK, have been for several weeks on the alert, and have now probably captured the robber. The amount of the robberies is supposed to be large. TUCKERMAN will be examined at New-Haven to-morrow.

Departure of Ex-President Pierce and Lady for Madeira.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Nov. 30.

Ex-President PIERCE and lady left here this afternoon in the Norfolk boat, to embark for Madeira. The Ex-President was escorted to the boat by the City Guards.

Hon. PIERCE received great attention from the Baltimoreans. He rode in an open carriage, accompanied by Mayor SWANN. The throng at the Norfolk boat cheered him warmly.

Gov. PRATT has issued commissions to all the recently elected officers of the State.

The Mild Weather.

RESUMPTION OF NAVIGATION ON THE ERIE CANAL.

ALBANY, Monday, Nov. 30.

The weather continues to be very mild, and the favorable accounts received from the West inspire us with a hope that all the produce now afloat upon the Canal will get through to tide-water, and that navigation may be entirely resumed. A dispatch to the Auditor, received from Newark, this morning, says that the weather is mild and the ice broken, and boats moving. A boat loaded with flour reached Albany to-day from Port Jefferson on Friday—this is quick time. A fleet of twenty boats reached Waterford yesterday—were immediately locked into the River, and are now on their way to New-York with 35,000 bushels Corn and Wheat.

The Hudson is all clear yet.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Monday, Nov. 30.

It has thawed here for the last two days, and rained heavily all this morning. The snow is melting quickly, and the ice in the Canal, though six inches thick, is breaking up. Superintendent FORTUNE came from Medina last evening, with an ice-breaker drawn by fourteen horses, and proceeded to Sulphur Springs, where he expects to meet the steam-tug from Buffalo, with forty to fifty boats following her. Appearances now indicate that navigation of the Canal will resume this evening.

THE WELLAND CANAL.

ST. CATHARINE'S, Canada, Monday, Nov. 30.

The ice in the Welland Canal is breaking up, and there is a prospect of the vessels in it getting through to the Lakes.

WEATHER AT ST. JOHNS, N. F.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Monday, Nov. 30.

The weather here this morning is very heavy and thick, and a storm is prevailing at Cape Race.

WEATHER AT BOSTON.

An easterly wind prevails here this evening, accompanied with rain.

WEATHER AT NEW-ORLEANS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, Nov. 28.

The weather here is very wet and warm.

Marine Disasters.

THE SHIP SYBIL, OF BATH, IN DISTRESS, ETC.

KEY WEST, Saturday, Nov. 21.

The ship Sybil, of Bath, from Mobile for Havana, was towed into this port on the 15th inst., by the United States schooner Pharos, totally dismasted and without anchors or chains. The ship encountered a severe hurricane on the 13th inst., near to Dog Rock, and to prevent her from going ashore, she was run inside and anchored. Finding she would not bring up, the three masts were cut away. On the 13th inst., the wind rounded to the east. Finding the anchor did not hold, a jury mast was rigged and the chain slipped and the ship steered for the coast. She was seen by the United States schooner Pharos, who went to her assistance and succeeded in getting inside the reef. News has just reached here that a ship, with provisions for Fort Jefferson, got ashore on entering the harbor, and has been assisted by the United States schooner Tortugas.

News from Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Nov. 30.

A Delegate Convention of the Free-State Party of Kansas has been called to meet at Lawrence on the 2d of December to take into consideration the present political position of the Territory, as well as the course to be pursued by that party in relation to the new Constitution about to be submitted for approval.

News by the Southern Mail.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 30.

The mail from all points South, as late as due, is to hand, but it brings no news of any importance.

An express from the Bahamas, at Charleston, reports several wrecks there; also that two large vessels, names unknown, were at Nassau, dismasted.

Captain GAMBLE, of the ship Ossippee, had arrived at Charleston.

The United States Steamship Fulton and Gen. Walker.

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, Nov. 28.

The United States steamship Fulton, we learn, is in the Boca del Torres, which flows into the Caribbean Sea, watching for Gen. WALKER and the filibusters.

Election of United States Senator from South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Monday, Nov. 30.

The Legislature to-day elected Ex-Governor HAMMOND United States Senator from South Carolina.

Capt. GERDES, of the Navy, died to-night at Charleston.

Burning of the Steamer New Lucy.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Monday, Nov. 30.

The steamer New Lucy was totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday last, while ice-bound at Detroit, on the Mississippi River. No lives were lost. The loss on the vessel amounts to $16,000, and the insurance to $12,000.

MONDAY, Nov. 30—P. M.

We again avail of the official figures of the Commerce and Navigation of the United States for 1857, which our Special Washington Correspondent has placed us in possession of, in advance of the Secretary's Report to Congress, to compile the following table of Exchanges with Foreign States. We have carefully separated the Specie items, and also the items of the Indirect Import trade, (as with Switzerland and the German Zollverein,) so as to present as nearly as may be, first, the Exchanges of the Products, other than the precious metals, of and between the United States and the Foreign States and their dependencies with which we trade; and secondly, the points to which our Exchanges in Specie are directed, to adjust the general balance. Both tables present several prominent points for remark, one of which is the large preponderance over all other countries presented by Great Britain in the trade with the United States, the balance in the exchange of the ordinary products of the two nations being this year $12,733,683 in favor of the United States. The second point is, that notwithstanding this balance in the direct trade with Great Britain, we settle $47,143,214 in Specie with other countries through London. Another feature of the present return is, the enormous increase in our import trade with Spain and her Islands; Cuba and Porto Rico alone having added $18,284,086 in Sugars, since the previous return of 1856, and Cuba about $2,248,566 in Molasses. The present value to Spain of the trade of the United States with her West India and Philippine (Manila, &c.) dependencies, is $56,846,803; placing her second to Great Britain only in the magnitude of her sales to this country.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York, for the week ending Saturday last, Nov. 28, the particulars of which are advertised by each bank, separately, on another page of this paper, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Nov. 21:

Decrease in Loans	$412,202
Increase in Specie	1,135,165
Decrease in Undrawn Deposits	610,525
Increase in Circulation	237,366

Including the operations of the Clearing-House, which average $15,201,844 per day, for the five business days of the week, (Thanksgiving day intervening,) and the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday afternoon, the following is the general comparison with the previous week, and also with the corresponding week last year:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Nov. 28, 1856.	Nov. 29, 1857.	Nov. 21, 1857.
Capital	$54,242,000	$63,519,000	$63,519,000

In Sub-Treasury	12,366,997	4,395,219	4,877,660

The Specie line, it will be seen, is steadily up, notwithstanding the considerable export demand of last week. The average has attained the high figure of $24,303,145, and this without including any part of the large California receipts of this morning. The export demand this week will probably embrace about $700,000 for the steamer to sail from Boston on Wednesday. There is also a steamer direct to sail on Saturday, the Atlantic, of the Collins line. The drawers of Exchange are demanding full Specie rates on London to-day, both for 60 days and short sight, say 108⅞@109⅞ at 60 days, and 110⅞@110⅞ at short sight. The business for the mail to-morrow is thus far moderate. The Bullion Brokers, in view of the demand, are paying $4 88 for English Sovereigns, and 100⅞@100⅞ for California bars, while the quotation for American Coin is unaltered, 100⅞ buyers, 100⅞@100⅞ sellers. Philadelphia funds have improved to 97⅞@98⅞; Baltimore not so good as on Saturday, 96@96⅞ ⅞ cent. The Money market generally easy.

The Stock Exchange was dull at the early session in the forenoon, and the sales in Shares were lighter than usual of late. Toward the close a speculative demand was shown for Reading, Toledo and Erie, each improving 1@1⅞ ⅞ cent. on the morning price. Reading left off 53⅞; Erie, 16@16⅞; Toledo, 42 ⅞ cent. New-York Central and the Western list were quiet. State Stocks and a few of the best loans of the Railways keep pretty firm. Illinois Central 7 ⅞ cents, 87; the Shares, 94⅞@95, and the Privilege Scrip 104 for February, and 105 for July. The general market left off steady.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of Messrs. FOSTER & THOMPSON, attorneys, in regard to certain mortgage bonds in Wisconsin.

We are requested to say that the December Coupons on the Bonds of the Petedam and Watertown Road, New-York, will be paid only at the office of the Company in Watertown, on or before the close of December.

The circulating notes of the Pahquioque Bank, of Connecticut, are redeemed by CARPENTER & VERMILYE, No. 44 Wall-street, at one ⅞ cent. discount.

On and after Dec. 2, trains of the Hudson River Railroad for Albany and Troy, will leave Chambers-street at 6:30 and 11:30 A. M., and 4:45 P. M.

Money Circulars for Europe.

Per Niagara.] NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Nov. 30, 1857.

Our last advices were dated the 24th inst. The following day news was received per telegraph advice from St. Johns, N. F., that there had been so intense a panic throughout Great Britain, that Government had found it necessary on the 13th to authorize the Bank of England to issue notes without regard to the restrictions imposed by the Act of 1844, and that in consequence of this step, tranquillity had immediately been restored, and business was resuming its regular course. These advices, although of a nature calculated rather to increase confidence, have caused an almost complete suspension of speculative movements, and a decline on the generality of railroad stocks. This decline has been further promoted by the heavy falling off in the October and November traffic on most of the lines. State Stocks and other securities more particularly wanted as investments, are, on the other hand, less under the influence of foreign advices than of the abundance of idle capital in the market, and show generally an advance on previous quotations. The money market has shown no change, and money continues difficult to employ with safety at a profit. To-day we have, via telegraph from St. Johns, the news by the Fulton from Southampton under date of the 18th announcing the continued favorable effects of the suspension of the Bank Act, but our stock market continues still inactive and heavy. State Stocks are higher and have been active, being in demand for investment. Virginia have advanced ¼ ⅞ cent.; Missouri, 1; Ohio, 1859, ¼; Louisiana, 4; Tennessee, Ohio, 1886, and New-York State Stocks, steady at previous quotations; Kentucky, sales at 90@90¼; United States 6s, 1867, at 112; North Carolina 1 ⅞ cent. lower. City and County Bonds—No sales worthy of notice. Milwaukee Municipal 7s have advanced 1 ⅞ cent. Railroad Bonds—Dull, with the exception of Illinois Construction Bonds, Michigan Central 8 ⅞ cent., 1st mortgages, the former at 1 ⅞ cent. advance, the latter at ¼ ⅞ cent.; Erie 2d mortgages, 1¼ ⅞ cent. lower; New-York Central 6s, ¼; 7s, and the 7s, 1876, without change; Freeland Bonds at 65; Chicago and Rock Island Bonds at 94¼. Railroad shares.—Some declined, with a few exceptions, the chief depression being in Michigan Southern. Preferred sales have not been active, except in Erie, Reading, New-York Central and Toledo. Erie, no variation; New-York Central has declined 3¼; Panama, 2; Michigan Central, 2; Michigan Southern, 3¼; do. Preferred, 10; Illinois Central, ½; Toledo, ½; Rock Island, 4; Galena and Chicago, 4¼; Cleveland and Pittsburg, ½; Milwaukee and Mississippi, ½; La Crosse and Milwaukee, ¼; Hudson River, 1; Reading has advanced 2¼; Cleveland, Cincinnati and Columbus, 2; Chicago and Burlington and Quincy, ¼. Money very abundant; loans on call, 7@5 ⅞ cent.; first-class paper, 9@12; second-class, 15@24; American Gold, 100¼@100¾. Exchanges firm, with an extremely limited business; London, 108@109; chief sales, 108¼@108¾; Paris, 5.25@5.16¾. MARIE & KANZ.

Per Niagara.] NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

Our last advices were of the 24th inst. Those of to-day embrace only four business days, a holiday having intervened. There is no striking change in the general condition of affairs. The news of the Liverpool steamer of 14th inst. (telegraphed from Newfoundland the 25th inst.) has lessened the uneasiness which the previous mail had left us. The suspension of the Act of the Charter of the Bank of England, which removes the prohibition from issuing bank-notes beyond a certain limit, and the immediate relief it produced in turning aside an impending panic, have been received with great satisfaction in this City, nevertheless the next advices are awaited with impatience. In the beginning of the week there was a recovery at the Stock Exchange, from the downward current at the close of our last advices, favored by the announcement of large specie shipments, but this upward movement was not sustained, and for the last two days the market has been weak, particularly in speculative securities; investment securities continue steady. State stocks have been rather active. The principal transactions were in Missouri 6s, at a rise of 1; in North Carolina 6s, New-York 6s and 5s, Ohio 6s, and in California 7s, without marked fluctuations. Virginia 6s have risen ⅝, and Michigan 6s have been done at 90. City Bonds—Brooklyn 6s are the only ones that have been done in important amounts; they have sold at from 80 to 90, interest included. A few Chicago 6s have also been done at a slight advance. Railroad Bonds—Moderate transactions in Illinois Central Constructions, at a decline of ¾. Erie 7s, 1871 and 1883, have fallen, the latter 1¼. There has been a pretty good demand for Michigan Central 8s, 1st mort., at about 82@83. At private sale, a rather large sale of Ohio and Pennsylvania Income Bonds took place, without change in price. Railroad shares.—The transactions are moderate, and on the whole the fluctuations result in a decline on the prices of last week. The chief business is in Reading at 3¼ advance; in New-York Central at a decline of 3¼, and in Erie of ¼; in Cleveland and Toledo of 1 advance; in Illinois Central of 1 decline; in Chicago and Rock Island of 3¼, and in Michigan Southern of 2¼ decline. Money without change, easy for loans on call. Discounts out of Bank remain very limited; confidence in business paper recovering but slowly. The rates are for current paper from 12@24 ⅞ cent., according to class and length. Exchanges on Europe were dull for the steamer. First-class bills on London, 108@109¼; very good ones 109 @109¼; Paris, 5 20@5 22. DE COPPET & CO.

Reform in the Currency.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your correspondent "R. H.," under the above caption, presents his views with some force of argument, but fails to point to the root of the evil or to supply a substitute for the evils complained of.

Rather than patch up the present unsteady, unsafe, and unconstitutional Banking system, wisdom points to the relinquishment of the past and present tried machinery—for it does not suit us—and to the adoption of an entirely new system which will carry us safely along through good and bad times.

The present period of commercial distress is perhaps a most auspicious season for calling attention to and for the adoption of sound practical financial principles, necessary to insure the general welfare and happiness of the whole people, and of a character, if practicable, to prevent the recurrence of these monetary revulsions which prove so disastrous, alike to the rich as well as to the poor.

I beg leave to suggest that attention be called first to section 10, article 1, of the American Constitution, in which it will be plainly seen intended that no State shall be authorized to make anything but gold and silver a tender in payment of debts.

The great importance of steady movements in the material affairs is apparent to all, and a safe circulating medium at par at all points within the United States is quite as apparent, and demands at our hands any necessary labor or trouble to bring about the desired objects; and, if others see, as I think I do, that we cannot right ourselves under the old system, let us go to work in good earnest—let us retrospect, look to the point of beginning—ah! even look at the language embodied in the tenth section of the Constitution, above recited, and let us frankly confess our error, from the very moment the first issue of bills of credit was ever authorized by any State Government, and so long tolerated by the General Government.

If we cannot constitutionally correct the evils of the past unsafe and unsteady system without calling a Convention of the States for the purpose of amending the Constitution, let that be the order of the day, and that, too, without delay; and when such Convention shall have convened, let other subjects also receive due consideration—not omitting to attach proper importance to the great "credit system," which is so intimately interwoven in all the ramifications of the past rotten and exploded system of banking. Any effective measures which will hold in wholesome check the very great desire to obtain princely fortunes as if by magic, would bestow blessings upon the American people; and while other correctives are being discussed, let the abolishment of all laws for the collection of debts by distress receive that attention which its importance does so richly merit.

It should be borne in mind that the permission to buy and sell on credit remains undisturbed, but the parties to engagements on time would necessarily become cautious, so that neither vendor nor buyer will venture so far as under the past and present system, thus dismissing a host of unproductive and useless agents engaged in the collection of debts, to the very great loss and inconvenience of both debtor and creditor, thereby turning the attention of all such agents into channels of productive usefulness, and leaving the creditor and the debtor to themselves as of right they should be. The honest and capable man would receive due encouragement, while the incompetent and the dishonest would sink into obscurity.

If the views which are herein presented be deemed worthy of a place in your valuable paper, which comes before me daily, you are at liberty to give them a place, but allow me first to assure you that the writer humbly hopes he may have submitted some hints which may serve suggestively in correcting the great evils under which the people groan, while the writer for himself claims no right of office or of wealth to thus obtrude himself upon the notice of your readers, for he well remembers the day when he was only "THE MILL-BOY."

The Pennsylvania Bank.

The Philadelphia Ledger of this morning says: "The Commissioners appointed by the Governor to examine the Bank of Pennsylvania, we understand, have made a partial report, which has been sealed and sent to the Governor. Private as it is supposed to be, it has leaked out, with what truth we know not, that "the liabilities are about $2,000,000, and the assets something rising $2,700,000. Of the liabilities, about $1,000,000 are due the banks in this city; upward of $100,000 due the banks in the interior of Pennsylvania; nearly $200,000 due on circulation, and about $300,000 on deposit, checks marked 'good,' &c. The assets consist of bills receivable, bonds, mortgages, real estate, &c.

The bills receivable comprise the larger portion of the assets, and among them are numerous protested and renewed notes. The real estate comprises the magnificent banking-house on Chestnut-street, and some other properties—the banking-house being the larger proportion. The Commissioners have not, as yet, completed the duties of their appointment, nor can they, until they know definitely whether the conting
